

Chapter 83

Lindsay held the struggling child. The boy was crying so hard he was almost out of breath. She took three ancient coins from her bag, waved them gently over the child's forehead, and placed one in his hand.

A surprising scene unfolded.

The moment the child grasped the coin, he stopped waving his hands and kicking his feet.

Gradually, he even stopped crying.

His tear-streaked face turned towards Lindsay, and his large, watery eyes stared at her.

Then, he spoke, "Pretty lady!"

The child's parents were stunned. May said, "He loves pretty girls. Whenever he sees a beautiful woman, he calls her pretty."

Elric chuckled. "The kid has good taste."

Lindsay smiled down at the child and gently pinched his cheek. "You're very cute too, little one."

The boy immediately hugged Lindsay's hand and smiled through his tears, repeating, "Pretty."

Lyle was amazed. His cousin had told him this young actress was very skilled in divination, but he had been skeptical.

Now, he couldn't deny it.

He couldn't help but ask, "Ms. Summer, has my son been affected by something supernatural, like a ghost or some kind of negative energy?"

May also looked at Lindsay with concern. "Yes, he's been like this for two months, crying non-stop every time he wakes up. We've never seen him so calm before."

She found it miraculous. Normally, when her son woke up crying, it would take over an hour to calm him down, and even then, he would be inconsolable.

But this mystic had merely held him and given him a coin, and he had calmed down immediately.

Lindsay gave them a reassuring look. "It's not what you think. He wore something he shouldn't have."

She gently took the child's other hand.

Lindsay carefully removed a red string bracelet from the child's wrist. Hanging from the bracelet was a small white crystal pig charm. She asked, "Where did you get this?"

Lyle replied, "I bought it at an antique market. I thought it was cute and my son likes piglets, so I bought it for him. Ms. Summer, is this charm causing my son's problem?"

Lindsay nodded, "Yes, the white crystal pig contains negative energy. This has been causing your son to have nightmares and wake up crying. The 'ghost' you mentioned is actually an energy field causing this negative energy. When someone is exposed to it, it can harm their health."

Lyle was puzzled. "How could this pig charm carry such negative energy?"

Lindsay explained, "This bracelet was probably stored with items from a grave, which caused it to absorb the negative energy. Fortunately, it hasn't absorbed too much, otherwise, your son would not only wake up crying but might also face more serious harm.

"If he wore this bracelet for a long time, he would start getting sick, and his condition would worsen over time."

In her world, divination was widely practiced, and many people were aware of the concept of negative energy. Many mystics even live-streamed their sessions, offering readings and advice.

Lyle was shocked and filled with fear. "So, this bracelet is the cause of my son's problems."

He pulled out his phone and checked his payment records. "It's true, my son started having these issues a few days after I brought this bracelet home."

May thought for a moment. "Yes, it did start after he began wearing the bracelet."

She couldn't hold back and pinched Lyle's arm several times. "Why did you buy something for our child from such a place?"

Lyle winced. "I didn't know this would happen. I'll be more careful from now on."
