

Chapter 241

He saw Autumn speaking gracefully, though at that moment the speakers on stage came on, and he couldn't quite hear what she said.

From the look of her, she seemed rather pleased. Judging by the movement of her lips, she was probably saying something like "thank you."

Luna noticed Julian's gaze fixed on Autumn and tugged at his arm. "Julian, what are you looking at?"

She couldn't stand him staring at another woman for too long, especially Autumn.

If the two of them rekindled old feelings, everything she had worked for would be wasted.

No! She couldn't allow that to happen. She had to stop any chance of them reconnecting.

Although Autumn had already left the Carter household, she had been married to Julian for years.

Even if there wasn't much love left, Autumn was deep-minded. Who knew if she might use Julian to spite her, just for revenge?

"Nothing." Pulled back from his thoughts, Julian instinctively withdrew his gaze.

He didn't know what was wrong with him.

Just now, he had looked at Autumn for quite a while. It seemed as though since she had left, she'd become very different.

He returned home less often, but every time he did, the house felt empty —there was no longer that familiar busy figure in sight.

Zoe had told him that Autumn had already begun moving her things out, only they hadn't noticed.

By the time they realized her belongings were gone, Autumn had already been away for several days.

It was only when Zoe went in to clean that she discovered Autumn's room was completely empty.

Stunned, she had immediately called Julian. "Sir, Madam's things are all gone. Did she move out in secret?"

At the time, Julian was in a meeting and assumed Autumn was just throwing another tantrum.

He didn't take it seriously and replied casually, "I know."

Then he hung up. But later he came to realize, Autumn hadn't been quarreling with him at all — she had truly left.

One day, two days, three days...

Even when he went in person to ask Autumn to withdraw the lawsuit, she gave him no respect at all.

She even conspired with his mother to trick him into signing the divorce papers. ¹

By the time he realized, the divorce certificate was already in her hands. In that instant, he felt Autumn was becoming more and more outrageous.

Didn't she fear that once she had the divorce certificate, he would ignore her forever? 2

There had to be a limit to throwing tantrums. So, he stopped indulging her and simply chose not to concern himself with her anymore.

Luna motioned for Julian to lower his head, then whispered something in his ear. Whatever she said, it instantly smoothed out the tension in his expression.

Soon after, Wilson stepped onto the stage and began by steadily reading his prepared speech.

When it came time to make the announcement, he collected his thoughts and said slowly, "Today I have some good news to share with you. After discussion within our medical AI department, we've decided to partner with capable companies.

"This round of bidding is different from the past. Candidates must go through three separate assessments, and in the final stage, only those with the top results will be chosen.

"These candidates represent their companies, so whether or not you win the bid and gain the partnership depends entirely on your engineers."

At this point, he paused, then added, "The exam is scheduled for one week from now. Anyone who wishes to register can do so with my assistant at any time."
