

Chapter 275

Grace couldn't make sense of it. She knew her daughter well—Sienna might dislike Autumn, but she wouldn't go so far as to frame her out of nowhere.

All these years nothing had happened, so why suddenly now? It had to be someone's influence, or she had done it for someone else's sake.

Sienna glanced nervously at Luna, then bit her lip and said, "Mom, I just couldn't stand Autumn. She's always trying to seduce my brother, even in front of Luna.

"I can't stand a woman who knowingly becomes the other woman. I wanted to nail her to the pillar of shame so she could never rise again." 1

Of course, she wasn't stupid enough to admit in front of Luna that Autumn was once her sister-in-law. All she could do was paint Autumn as shameless.

That woman had no dignity—knowing full well her brother was with Luna yet still clinging to him. 1

Even after the divorce, she refused to stop, and now she was even suing her.

It was disgusting.

Thinking back to the days when she used to treat Autumn like her sister-in-law made her seethe.

What kind of sister-in-law treated her like this? Only Luna was worthy of being her brother's wife. Autumn was nothing but an ungrateful wolf, utterly hateful.

The more she thought about it, the deeper her resentment grew.

Grace tapped Sienna's forehead with a finger.

"Can't you use your brain before acting? You hate her, so you left all these handles for her to grab. And now she's holding them tight, refusing to let go. If we lose, you'll be the one going to prison."

The thought gave her a pounding headache. All she could do now was pin her hopes on Will.

But after watching the surveillance footage, Will was dumbfounded.

This idiot was beyond saving.

Not only had she failed to avoid the cameras, she'd even made mocking faces right into them.

It was stupidity beyond measure.

Completely out of options, he stood up and turned to Julian. "Mr. Carter, your sister is simply too foolish. Forgive my lack of skill, but I can't defend her any further.

"This was supposed to be winnable—you promised me that, otherwise I never would have taken the case! Who knew you'd turn out like this?

"Forget it, I'll take the loss. Keep the fee—I won't have my reputation ruined. I'm leaving." 1

With that, Will stood and walked out of the courtroom.

A defense attorney abandoning his client mid-trial, even giving up his fee to protect his name—it was a first for everyone.

The moment he left, the entire gallery froze in shock. The defendants had lost their last pillar of support. 1

Sienna tried to call after him, but he didn't so much as glance back, striding straight out without hesitation.

Her teeth ground together in fury.

Just moments ago, she had mocked Autumn for having no lawyer, and now it was her own lawyer who had walked away.

The reversal came so suddenly it left Sienna reeling, unable to react before the damage was done.

Even Luna hadn't foreseen this outcome. Watching Will's departing figure, her expression grew thoughtful. 1

Ace submitted the evidence, and after deliberation, the court ruled: Sienna would be held in criminal detention for one month, and all appeals were rejected.

Sienna collapsed into her chair, sobbing. "I don't accept this! I won't go to prison—I demand an appeal!"

The judge's voice was stern. "Appeal denied." 2
