

Resume 36

Ex-Husband Wants Badly to Resume Their Marriage Chapter 36

She Had No Other Choice Back Then

However, when she found out that it was the person who rejected her request three years ago that ridiculed her every day for marrying him for money, she still felt uncomfortable.

It was as if someone was slowly grinding her heart with a rusty knife. It was both bitter and painful.

Fortunately, she and Jameson had divorced.

Otherwise, she really wished that she could smother him with a pillow when he fell asleep beside her at night.

Perhaps pregnancy had made Sharon sentimental and emotional, she couldn't get over it for quite a time.

She woke up in the middle of the night to find her pillow wet by tears.

The more Sharon thought about it, the angrier she became.

She picked up the phone and made a Moments post.

"There is no other man in this world more annoying than XXX!!!"

She used three exclamation marks to vent her anger.

Amongst the many comments that expressed concern, only Jacob, who was working late at night, gave her a like without saying anything else.

He seemed to be saying, "I know who you're talking about, and I think the same."

Sharon went speechless.

She calmed down for a few seconds and was going to delete this post when she realized that Jameson had been blacklisted and couldn't see it.

So what if he saw it? She didn't post his name.

If he must claim it, she couldn't do anything about it.

Sharon had slept too much these past few days.

Now that she was awakened from anger, she felt even more energetic.

She got out of bed and began to work on her draft.

In another place.

When Giana was browsing Moments, she saw a particularly funny message.

She took a screenshot and shared it in her WeChat working group.

Her colleagues laughed and discussed for a while.

Then Giana suddenly received a private message from Jameson, "What did Sharon post?"

Giana replied,

"?"

Jameson was impatient, "At the bottom of your screenshot, what did Sharon post?"

Only then did Giana realize that below the post on her screenshot was Sharon's post.

Though the post itself wasn't shown, one could see Sharon's name. Giana was shocked.

She hurriedly asked her assistant when Jameson joined her WeChat working group.

The assistant said that Jameson had been there since the incident two years ago.

It was just that he had never spoken in the group.

Giana replied with an ellipsis.

That is, when she occasionally roasted Jameson as an evil capitalist, the roastee himself saw them all.

Giana felt a chill down her back.

She could only open her Moments to take a look.

She kindly asked, "Mr. Proctor, do you really want to know?"

Jameson replied, "Give me a screenshot."

Soon, that eye-catching message appeared in front of Jameson.

Giana cut out all irrelevant things, including Jacob's like and Giana's comment to highlight what Sharon had posted.

Giana felt that this XXX was ingenious.

It conveyed anger with dignity, so subtle and expressive.

Even if this XXX saw the message himself, he wouldn't find anything wrong unless he admitted that he was that annoying man.

Jameson was silent for a long time.

Giana thought that he probably wouldn't reply.

Just when she was about to put down her phone and go to sleep, a message from Jameson popped up.

"Whatever she posts in the future, give me screenshots."

"I'll give you a week's holiday."

"I'm not the kind of person who betrays her friends for a small profit!"

"Two weeks."

"OK.

Thank you.' After the conversation with Jameson, Giana apologized to Sharon, saying that she betrayed Sharon under her boss's pressure and threat.

Giana also told Sharon that she would have to give Jameson screenshots of Sharon's Moments in the future.

Sharon replied with an ellipsis.

"How come this man is so shameless!"

Thus, for the next two days, Sharon sent three posts scolding Jameson every day and shared them with Giana only.

Then Giana sent screenshots to Jameson, leaving him to endure the insults.

Thinking of Jameson's expression when he saw those screenshots, Sharon felt refreshed both physically and mentally for revenging on him.

Just as Sharon's mood gradually reached its peak, she received a phone call from the secretary of Yates Salloman, owner of Lumiere Jewelry.

The secretary said that it was something about Sharon's contract.

Upon Sharon's arrival, Yates, who was in his fifties, poured her a cup of tea and said with a smile, "Sharon, I heard from Lance that you were in hospital. How do you feel now?"

Sharon smiled, "Thank you for your concern, Mr. Yates. I've recovered."

"That's good. I've heard about your performance in the show. If it weren't for you, our carefully prepared show would have been completely ruined. You've done a great favor to Lumiere Jewelry."

"Mr. Yates, I'm flattered. I just did what I could."

At that time, she didn't think too much given the situation. Moreover, she only walked the show once, and Giana helped complete the rest. Yates was not used to beat around the bush.

He opened a craft bag and put a document in front of her.

"This is the contract you signed with me before. Now, it doesn't count anymore. We'll just follow the contract you signed when you first joined Lumiere Jewelry."

"But I..." Sharon was stunned.

She didn't expect that Lumiere Jewelry would cancel her contract only for one show.

Moreover, she had taken two million, and the liquidated damages were not a small figure.

"I know what you're thinking. I didn't plan to cancel the contract with you because of the show. I was going to thank you in other ways, but... Your liquidated damages have been paid, so I can't help but let you go."

Yates said as if he could read her mind.

Sharon was even more confused, "The liquidated damages have been paid?"

"That's right. This happened a week ago."

Yates took a sip of tea and sighed, "I was on a vacation in Greece when the CEO of the Proctor Group suddenly found me and directly paid the money. I owed you a favor, so I agreed."

Sharon didn't know what to say. She was silent for a long time.

She just made up her mind to sign a contract like an impunity clause with Lumiere Jewelry so that she could pay the two million back.

Now he returned the two million to Lumiere Jewelry with extra liquidated damages of nearly ten million.

Sharon felt bent out of shape.

As soon as she left Yates' office, Lance found her, saying that the Proctor Group had decided to support Sharon.

Now that Sharon was no longer restrained by the contract, she could contact the Proctor Group at any time and get any resources she wanted.

Sharon pursed her lips and didn't say anything.

She felt Jameson was playing tricks on her and making her into a big fool.

'Does he hate me that much? The marriage has been over for so long, yet his revenge seems endless and growing like a snowball.

Back then, I only...I went to him because I had no other choice and didn't want the unborn baby to suffer together.