

Chapter 170 Being A Bridesmaid

As the phone rang, Fiona quickly answered it with a sense of urgency in her voice.

"Rhonda, you finally called me. I've been so worried," she exclaimed.

"What's the matter, Fiona?" Rhonda inquired.

"My sister's wedding is tomorrow, and it's been moved up. Unfortunately, one of the bridesmaids can no longer make it. I was wondering if you could be Alivia's bridesmaid instead?"

Rhonda frowned, taken aback by the request. "But Fiona, I'm already married. Can I still be a bridesmaid?" she asked.

"Don't worry about that. It doesn't matter if you're married or not. I just really need you to do me this favor," Fiona pleaded.

Rhonda hesitated. "I'm not sure if it's appropriate for me to be the bridesmaid since I didn't get along well with your sister the last time we saw each other at your company," she explained.

Fiona brushed off the concern. "That was in the past. My sister is a reasonable person, and she's agreed to let you be the bridesmaid. I can't find anyone else, you know. Please, can you do this for me?" she begged, on the verge of tears.

Feeling obligated, Rhonda reluctantly agreed to be the bridesmaid, knowing that she couldn't refuse Fiona's request.

Eliam's face darkened at Rhonda's response. "You agreed to it?" he questioned.

Rhonda let out a heavy sigh. "I don't want to go either," she admitted.

The atmosphere between them grew tense and uncomfortable, and Eliam remained silent until he dropped Rhonda off at her home.

Rhonda could sense that Eliam was angry, and she wanted to speak up and address the issue. However, she decided against it and remained quiet.

Shortly after Eliam had departed, Fiona arrived and took Rhonda to her house.

Fiona had purchased a new dress for Rhonda and hired a professional makeup artist to enhance Rhonda's appearance.

Rhonda didn't feel it was necessary to go to such lengths as she was only a bridesmaid and didn't want to overshadow the bride.

However, Fiona believed that Rhonda's appearance was a reflection of her sister's wedding and she wanted Rhonda to look her best. Fiona also felt that as Rhonda had come to the rescue, she should look presentable and not appear shabby.

After spending the entire morning getting ready, Rhonda and Fiona arrived at the wedding venue to find that most of the guests had already arrived.

Both families, as well as relatives and friends, were seated and waiting for the ceremony to begin.

Fiona brought Rhonda over to Alivia, who was already surrounded by three other bridesmaids. With Rhonda's arrival, the bridesmaid group now became four.

As they were standing there, Robert appeared.

He was dressed in a pristine white suit that accentuated his tall and handsome physique. Despite his expressionless demeanor, Alivia couldn't help but feel her heart fill with joy at the sight of him.

She found herself captivated by his perfect features and couldn't take her eyes off him.

As Robert walked over, he noticed Rhonda standing behind Alivia. A flicker of happiness flashed across his face before quickly disappearing.

"Do you have your ring with you?" Alivia stepped forward and asked.

He nodded, but his eyes didn't meet hers. Instead, he glanced subconsciously at Rhonda, causing Alivia to feel a sudden wave of unhappiness.

She regretted agreeing to let Rhonda be a bridesmaid, feeling that Rhonda was a wet blanket.

Alivia pouted and said to Robert, "It's our wedding day. Can't you at least try to be happy?"

Robert responded impatiently, "It's none of your business whether I'm happy or not. Why do you even care about my expression?"

Jennifer, who was standing nearby, pulled Robert's arm and said, "Robert, don't talk like that."

Robert didn't say anything, but his face darkened, indicating his displeasure.

Fiona was busy attending to the guests while Rhonda waited for her turn to come up on stage.

Just then, the emcee announced that the wedding was about to begin and the music started playing. Robert and Alivia walked hand in hand from the door, followed by Rhonda and the other bridesmaids.

Rhonda, being tall and beautiful, stood out among the bridesmaids, even upstaging the bride herself with her dress and makeup.

The guests couldn't help but wonder if Rhonda was intentionally trying to steal the spotlight from the bride. They couldn't understand why Alivia would choose such a stunning bridesmaid.

Even Alivia herself had already regretted her decision when she saw Rhonda at the beginning.

However, she had agreed to let Rhonda be the bridesmaid because it was Robert's request.

She thought it was no big deal since he was already married to her.

Still, things became unpredictable.
