

Chapter 39 The Trouble Caused By A Bunch Of Roses

Eliam said her fever was caused by measles. Her fever had subsided now. She felt itchy but couldn't scratch her skin because it would cause scars.

Rhonda sprang up and looked at him worriedly. "Did the doctor say it's contagious? Will you also be infected?"

"Yes, it is. But I've already got measles before. So I won't get infected."

"Really?"

Eliam nodded guiltily. The doctor said he had to send Rhonda to the isolation ward if there was nobody to look after her.

Therefore, Eliam lied that he had measles before and wouldn't be infected. Moreover, he had intimate contact with Rhonda last night. It was too late to stay away from her anyway.

Three days later, Rhonda almost recovered, and Richard's operation was also successfully completed.

However, he had to stay in the hospital for a week for observation and recovery. Therefore, Eliam decided to go home first, and Rhonda would accompany Richard.

The night before Eliam left, the two had dinner together.

Ever since Rhonda fell sick, she could sense the change in Eliam's attitude toward her. He was no longer cold and distant but was kind to her.

He waited for her to have breakfast together in the morning. If she woke up late, he would ask the servant to pack the breakfast and send it to her room.

Although it was normal behavior, Rhonda could sense he was considerate.

As days passed, Rhonda couldn't resist Eliam. Sometimes, she would get nervous around him.

Every time Eliam looked at her, she would be at a loss for words.

Rhonda never had such a feeling for Santino. Sometimes she doubted whether she loved him or not.

Eliam barely spoke while eating. His every movement was elegant, making him look like a thorough gentleman.

Rhonda could see the women around were all ogling at Eliam. Therefore, she deliberately sliced a piece of steak and brought it near his mouth.

Eliam frowned. He was a neat freak; he never liked using other people's tableware.

However, noticing that all women were staring at him, he immediately understood Rhonda's intention.

Although it seemed childish, he fulfilled her wish.

He held Rhonda's hand and took a bite of the steak.

"Are you happy now?" Eliam looked at Rhonda with a knowing smile. It looked like he had read her mind.

Eliam continued to hold Rhonda's hand, showing no intention of letting it go.

A blush flamed Rhonda's cheeks.

Eliam couldn't help but smile at how adorable she looked.

"Has anyone ever told you that you look charming when you're shy?"

Rhonda's face turned a shade redder when she heard that.

Eliam stopped teasing her, let go of her hand, and fed her a piece of steak.

Just then, the receptionist called Rhonda and told her that someone had sent her a bunch of flowers and asked her to collect them from the front desk.

Hearing that, Eliam asked the receptionist to bring the flowers to the dining room.

Soon, a staff walked in with a bunch of red roses.

There was a card on it. She opened and saw a message written in German, "Ich kenne dich, ich liebe dich, und ich vermisse dich jeden Tag und Nacht."

Just as she read it, Eliam snatched the card from her.

Eliam's face darkened when he read the romantic lines.

"Do you have any friends in Germany?" Eliam crumpled the card and threw it into the trash can.

"No, I don't have any foreign friends."

"It's not from a foreigner. This card is not written by a German." Judging from the clumsy handwriting, Eliam could tell the person must have just learned German.

"That's impossible! I didn't tell anyone about..." Rhonda stopped. She remembered calling Robert when she came to Germany and asked him to prescribe painkillers for Nora.

"Do you remember who it is?"

"I don't think it's him. He knows I'm married. He wouldn't do such a thing."

"Dr. Coyle?" EIAM guessed it right away.

"Well, on our first day here, I asked him to prescribe medicine for my grandmother and told him I was in Germany."

"There's more to it. He seems to know the hotel and room you're staying in." EIAM put down his fork, stood up, and left.

Rhonda ran after him to explain everything. But EIAM refused to listen to her.

He strutted forward, and Rhonda couldn't catch up with him. Finally, EIAM stopped at the door of his room.

He turned around and asked, "Is that doctor so good?" His eyes blazed with anger.

"No. It's not like that. Let me explain..."

EIAM pinned Rhonda against the wall, snatched the flowers from her hand, and threw them into the trash can at the door.

Rhonda had never seen EIAM look this angry before.

Although she felt bad for the innocent flowers, she dared't utter a word because EIAM's face was inching toward hers.

Rhonda's eyes widened when she realized he was about to kiss her. Her mind went blank.

Eliam's breathing became heavy and rapid. He seemed more nervous than Rhonda.

His Adam's apple bobbed in his throat. Eliam loosened his tie and covered Rhonda's eyes with his hand.

Then, he leaned forward and kissed Rhonda's cold, trembling lips.

Eliam kissed her like an inexperienced boy, kissing for the first time.

His teeth scraped her lips. The smell of blood made Eliam slow down.

After kissing for a long while, the two parted reluctantly.

They were gasping for breath, and their flushed faces seemed to garner everyone's attention.

Rhonda ran back to her room shyly and giggled as she hid under her quilt.

She slept like a baby that night. When Rhonda woke up the next morning, she got a message from Eliam, saying he had boarded the flight.

Her heart sank when she read that. She missed him already. Rhonda didn't know when she had fallen in love with him.

A blush flamed her cheeks, and her heart took a sprint in her chest as she replayed the kiss last night.

After going back, Eliam never sent her a message. Rhonda checked his Facebook every day, but he never posted Finally, Richard's health got better, so they decided to return home. Rhonda couldn't wait to see Eliam. The moment she got off the plane, she began looking for him in the crowd.

Suddenly, she heard someone calling her name. She turned around and saw Ingrid and Miranda waiting for them in the arrivals hall.

Rhonda wheeled Richard toward them.

"Where is Eliam? Why hasn't he come?"

"He is with..."

Before Ingrid could finish her words, Miranda hurriedly interrupted her, "He is busy with a client, so he asked us to pick you up."

Then, they all got in the car.

On their way, Ingrid kept asking questions and complaining to Rhonda that she had been bored without her.

However, nothing reached her ears. Rhonda kept wondering why Eliam didn't come to the airport to pick them up.

Eliam wasn't someone who would ignore his family for work. He would have come to pick them up regardless of how busy he was.

Rhonda couldn't fathom why he didn't come to the airport.

She wondered if it was because of Diana.

Her heart sank at the thought, but she couldn't ask him
