

The Heiress' Return: Six Brothers at Her Beck and Call (Wynter Quinnell) Chapter 346

Chapter 346 Wynter's Fortune Telling Skill

Wolf nodded and then shook the bell again with a smile. He seemed to really like the bracelet.

However, Wynter's eyes darkened significantly. She was someone who never believed that people were inherently good or evil. The scariest thing wasn't demons. It was the human heart.

Since she had taken Wolf in, she would continue to take care of him.

All she needed to do was avoid provoking this glutton. Wynter pinched Wolf's smooth face.

Suddenly, Wolf remembered something and gestured with his hand.

That guy is going to die. I could smell it."

"Everyone has their destiny. Let's see if he goes street racing today."

Previously, Wynter couldn't tell someone's future from their face at a glance. She could only analyze it based on facial features. It was a method Atwater had taught her for physiognomy.

There was a saying in physiognomy, "A person with a round nose is usually good-natured". Although it couldn't identify the person's nature with 100% accuracy, it was usually quite accurate.

If a person committed too many evil deeds, it would be reflected in their facial features. That was the law of nature and something that couldn't be concealed.

But today was the first time Wynter had encountered something like this. By the time she tried to take a closer look, there was nothing left for her to see.

She analyzed the rest based on the tarot card that Logan drew. He was at risk of bloodshed.

Wolf tilted his head, gesturing again. "Something's wrong with you today."

"I've recovered some instincts." Wynter wasn't sure if it was related to her finding her biological family, or if it was because she had returned to Kingbourne.

Atwater had said before that she should return to Kingbourne sooner and that Kingbourne was where she should be, but she had forgotten.

Wynter played with the purple sugilite pendant around her waist. "But something is still missing."

When Abel found what she called "the thing underground", perhaps then she would understand what Atwater meant.

Ronan felt that the conversation was a bit strange, but couldn't pinpoint where the problem laid. "Ms. Quinnell, are you saying that Mr. Logan will really be in trouble?"

While fortune telling was quite common, it wasn't quite like how Wynter did it.

Ronan was genuinely worried. "Ms. Quinnell, weren't you just scaring him?"

"I was." Wynter kept the Evercrest Gems in her bag and smiled faintly.

"Uncle Ronan, pay attention to the news tomorrow. I'm taking Wolf to visit the Quinnell residence.”

Ronan was about to say something to send them off when an SUV with the Yarwood family’s license plate pulled up.

The driver opened the door respectfully. “Mrs. Yarwood, Mr. Yarwood is working late at the company, so he sent us to pick you up.”

Ronan was taken aback when he heard “Mrs. Yarwood”. Suddenly, he was at a loss for how to react.

Wasn’t there a rumor that Dalton wasn’t happy with this marriage? He only agreed due to pressure from the older generation and to avoid feeling indebted to the Quinnell family.

And didn’t Dalton even try to call off the engagement personally? But somehow, it didn’t work out in the end. Ronan thought this was just a typical family alliance.

But now, thinking back to Wynter’s text and Dalton’s reaction, along with the arrival of the Yarwood family’s personal vehicle, wasn’t this telling the world that she was his fiancée?

Ronan was dumbfounded. He didn’t remember Dalton being this kind of person.

Everyone in Kingbourne knew that Dalton was hard to win over. He had a way of making others feel like he was out of their league, for he emitted an air that kept people at a distance.

Ronan wanted to gossip. “Ms. Quinnell, your relationship with Mr. Yarwood seems different from the rumors.”

“What are the rumors ?” Wynter, who was about to get into the car, suddenly became interested.

"It's just gossip," Ronan replied.

Wynter smiled and said, "It sounds like it's not a flattering rumor then."

Ronan sighed helplessly. "The rumors circulating in these circles tend to be like that."

"Such as?" Wynter smirked, intrigued.

Though she really didn't mind, Ronan still wanted to give her a heads-

"The version I heard is that you were brought back from the village and everyone thought you wouldn't amount to much. They said you were definitely not worthy of Mr. Yarwood.

"He had already rejected you, but you kept pursuing him, and that's why the engagement wasn't canceled."

"That's pretty close to what I thought," Wynter said with a playful in her eyes.

All the scenes from her dreams were gradually coming true. Wynter remembered vividly that the first step toward ruining her in her dreams was these rumors.

"Close to what you thought?" Ronan was dumbfounded. "Why are you even thinking about these things?" It would be depressing to think about them.

Wynter casually replied, "It's only natural to imagine what people are saying about you when you're new to a place."

The Yarwood family's driver couldn't stand it anymore. "Mrs.

Yarwood, rest assured. I'll report these rumors to Mr. Yarwood, and he'll handle them. No one can slander you."

Didn't the outsiders know that Dalton had feelings for Wynter? He had finally opened up to someone. How dare these people spread nonsense like this before they were officially married?

Wynter chuckled. "There's no need for that. It has nothing to do with him."

This was the norm in their circles. Even if she were engaged to Logan instead of Dalton, the rumors would spread in the same way. Dalton just attracted more attention..

The driver wasn't joking. "Mr. Yarwood will blame himself. He has always instructed us to protect you well."

Ronan listened in astonishment. "The world is really full of surprises. Even Mr. Ernest has someone he wants to protect?"

Just as he was muttering to himself, he received a message on his phone.

"I'll treat you to dinner another day-Dalton."

Ronan swallowed nervously. Although he was affiliated with Fabian, someone of his status still wouldn't normally have contact with this scion of Kingbourne.

Ronan quickly replied to the message. “Mr. Yarwood? You’re too kind.”

The response came quickly. “It’s only right. My fiancée had a great time shopping, thanks to you.”

So this was all for Wynter? When Ronan looked up again, his eyes were filled with shock. Wynter didn’t know what was going on with him. She just waved casually through the car window.

Ronan parted his lips, about to ask something else, when another message popped up on his phone.

“I have a question for you. What happened with the Winstons today?”

Ronan immediately typed a response. However, Dalton was faster.

“Sir Rathbone, can you take a call?”

Ronan replied, “Of course!”

As soon as he sent his message, the call came through. Dalton’s voice was polite.

“Sir Rathbone, sorry to bother you. It’s just that my fiancée is young and new to Kingbourne. She doesn’t have any connections or friends, so she’s easily bullied. I’d like to know what happened.”

“No bother at all.” Ronan straightened up.

Dalton’s voice turned cold after he cleared his throat. “I’m not sure how much you know about me, but I believe in an eye for an eye.”

Ronan thought to himself that it would be more like a bomb than an eye. After all, if someone crossed Dalton, their businesses would be ruined.

“The Winstons were very disrespectful to Ms. Quinnell.” Ronan immediately expressed his allegiance without hesitation. “Mr. Logan was fine, but Mr. Chad needs to be taught a lesson.”

Ronan apologized to the Winstons in his mind. It wasn’t that he was oblivious, but Dalton spoke of retribution while maintaining a polite demeanor.

The stark contrast left Ronan feeling a chill down his spine. Suddenly, he wasn’t sure if it was a good thing for Wynter to marry a man like this.

At this moment, Dalton’s voice softened again. “Mr. Quinnell must have had his reasons for asking you to show her around. Please assist her if she needs anything.”

Ronan responded quickly, “Even if you hadn’t called, I would have been willing to help Ms. Quinnell. It’s an honor for me to meet her.”

The Xerton coin in his pocket felt conspicuous. He had accompanied many people on shopping trips in Panzarath.

Who cared about those old rules nowadays? Some people, like Naom and Shane, treated him like a servant and expected him to cater to them.

Today, for the first time, Ronan felt that being an external member of the Quinnell family wasn't so bad.

Previously Fabian, and now Wynter. While businesspeople often pursued profit, Ronan admired and devoted himself to those who would leave behind lasting value.

Dalton seemed surprised by Ronan's response. Ronan's information was on Dalton's desk. Ronan was on good terms with all the aristocratic families in Kingbourne. They were considered his employers.

He smiled at everyone and spoke kindly, but it was hard to have him. open up.

As long as there was no personal gain involved, he could betray anyone at any time. Only Fabian could truly connect with him.

Ronan had never openly declared his support for anyone before. But now, he was backing Wynter. It seemed Wynter had once again done something unexpected.

Smiling, Dalton tapped his long fingers on the desk. "Sorry for overstepping. I'm relieved that you think that way. With you by her side, she won't be left alone if any conflicts arise."

“But I don’t think Ms. Quinnell feels alone at all,” Ronan couldn’t help but comment when he noticed how engaging the legendary scion was. “She didn’t seem to care about the rumors circulating in our circles.”

Dalton’s fingers paused, and then he asked slowly, “What rumors?”

Ronan repeated what he had told Wynter earlier. Upon hearing his words, Dalton’s eyes turned cold, and his grip on his pen tightened. The scarlet rosary bracelet on his wrist seemed to glisten like blood.

This was the scene Franklin witnessed when he entered the room. He had never seen Dalton like this before. The air around him was chilling as if he were about to do something dreadful at any moment.

Then Franklin heard Dalton say on the phone, “You can spread a fact.”

Ronan was puzzled. “What?”

Chapter 348 Dalton Is Actually a Hopeless Romantic

“I pursued her. She ignored my affection and denied my advances,” Dalton said, still smiling as he spoke. “The wedding date depends on her mood.”

Ronan was shocked. This wasn’t a fact. If this were to get out in their circles, it would be like dropping a bomb.

“No one would believe you if you said that.”

It was quite outlandish. After all, Dalton had the kind of face that suggested he didn’t need to pursue others.

But now, he was claiming that Wynter had rejected his advances. That seemed too far-fetched, even for the rumor mill.

Dalton looked up and took the contract from Franklin’s hand while saying calmly, “Sir Rathbone, feel free to spread this. I’ll affirm it later.

Let’s see who doesn’t believe it.”

Ronan and Franklin were left speechless.

The Heiress' Return: Six Brothers at Her Beck and Call (Wynter Quinnell) Chapter 349

Chapter 349 Dalton's Decision Changed the Winston Family

At night, the Winston brothers returned to the hillside villa. The wealthy often sought places with a good environment to reside.

Although the Winstons usually stayed together, Chad and Logan had their own residences. Clyde had always found Logan displeasing, and Logan didn't want to return home and upset anyone.

Oddly, this time Clyde praised him, "How did you get to know that young man from the Yarwood family?"

The Yarwood family? Who? Logan had his head bowed and was picking at his fingernails. He lifted his face upon hearing Clyde's words. "What?"

Seeing him act this way, the busy Clyde felt a surge of anger. But he suppressed it and asked again, "Do you know Dalton well?"

"Not really." Logan was puzzled. "He's such a legendary person. Even Chad doesn't know him, let alone someone like me."

Standing beside him, Chad glanced at him before saying, "Grandpa, did something happen? Why are you suddenly asking that?"

"He called me this afternoon and mentioned he wants to befriend Logan because of Logan's straightforward nature."

Clyde looked at Logan. "Whatever the reason you got close, entertain him during the reception banquet. You're peers, after all. Interacting with him won't hurt."

Logan pointed at himself with widened eyes. "Grandpa, are you sure

Mr. Yarwood was praising me and not Chad?"

Clyde chuckled. "I'd rather he praise Chad. I could worry a little less then."

2/3

"That's strange," Logan muttered to himself. He hadn't noticed that Chad's lowered gaze was slowly darkening.

Clyde knew their personalities well. Although they were half-siblings, their personalities were completely different.

Logan was the legitimate son of the Winston family, whereas Chad was illegitimate. However, no one else knew about this. The Winston family didn't allow such scandals.

Clyde was pleased with Chad's ideas and strategies. He believed that Chad had the endurance and understanding to do what was best for the Winston family.

Logan, however, had neither achievement nor ambition. Such a person wasn't suitable for the Winston family. Hence, Clyde had already chosen his successor a long time ago.

Plus, Chad always took care of Logan, and the two were as close as real brothers.

Clyde naturally felt at ease. As long as his son's mistress didn't have any other intentions, the Winston family would eventually belong to Chad. Chad understood this as well.

Upon leaving, he asked Logan with a smile, "When did you meet Mr. Yarwood? I had no idea."

"I met him when I was with Tobias." Logan was also pondering this. "He's always been good to the Quinnell family. I think he considers.

Tobias his brother. We exchanged a few words at that time."

It was really just a few words. One of them was Logan asking Dalton. if he wanted tea. Logan wanted to say beer, but given Dalton's cool and noble demeanor, he decided to stick to tea.

Dalton shook his head and coughed lightly. "It's fine."

At that time, Logan had been thinking that even though they were in the same circle, there were differences between them.

hey were

Dalton was only three or four years older than them. While they street racing, he was already sitting by the floor-to-ceiling window, attending international conferences. Logan truly admired and feared

Dalton.

As Chad watched Logan's expressive face, he knew Logan was also puzzled. "Since Grandpa has entrusted you with entertaining Mr.

Yarwood, let's see how it goes when the time comes."

Chapter 350 Wynter Saved Logan

Logan had never attended a formal reception banquet before. He usually hung out with his cronies. His main goal at such banquets was to avoid embarrassing himself.

With Chad, his outstanding brother, standing in front, he didn't need to do much.

This time, Logan was somewhat anxious. "Maybe you should do it, Chad. You know I'm not good at these things."

Chad took out his phone, seemingly indifferent. "Mr. Yarwood wants to befriend you. I shouldn't be the one entertaining him."

"How about we stick together? You can remind me of what to watch out for," Logan suggested.

Chad put away his phone. "Let's decide when the time comes. You know I'm here to spend time with Naomi."

"Chad, didn't that young lady say today that she already has feelings for someone else?" Logan advised. "And since Mr. Yarwood is coming, why bother gifting her anything? I don't think it's necessary."

Chad looked at him. "I'm happy to do that. Mr. Quinnell Senior's biological granddaughter has returned, and Naomi might feel awkward. Someone needs to be by her side. You don't really believe the words of that charlatan, do you?

Chad sighed heavily. "I didn't tell Grandpa today, but you should know he has always respected Mr. Novak. Speaking rudely to him for a charlatan today was a serious mistake."

Logan restrained himself, but still couldn't help but say, "Chad, haven't you noticed that since Grandpa met Mr. Novak, some of his decisions. have become more and more unreasonable?"

Instantly, Chad covered Logan's mouth. "It's fine to say that in front of me, but don't say it to anyone else."

Logan understood. He felt stifled. If he could, he'd rather not return home.

"Alright. If you're annoyed, go out for a drive. Isn't Tobias back in Kingbourne?" Chad said calmly.

"The Quinnells are really interesting. Naomi has been in Kingbourne for many years, but Tobias has never come back. He always says that he's busy. But now that his new sister is back, suddenly he's not so busy anymore."

"Chad, don't you think that sounds a bit strange?" Logan usually wouldn't argue with Chad, but today his patience was wearing thin.

"Naomi is a sponsee of the Quinnell family, but the one who returned is their blood relative. Why does it matter if she's new?"

Chad chuckled. "Alright, alright. I know you're close to Tobias and don't like hearing me speak ill of him."

“That’s not the point!” Logan sometimes couldn’t stand Chad’s self-righteousness.

“Except for Mr. Shane, everyone else in the Quinnell family is against adopting Naomi. Tobias even had a falling out with you last time over this. You shouldn’t disregard his concern for his biological sister just because you like Naomi. That’s really odd.”

Chad clearly didn’t expect Logan to react so strongly Chuckling, he said, “What’s wrong with you? I was just saving
