

THE HEIRESS' RETURN: SIX BROTHERS AT HER BECK AND CALL

Chapter 558

Chapter 558 I'm Lamar

The crowd erupted as soon as she said those words.

Plagiarism? Stealing? If that was the truth, the Quinnells' stock price would decline.

However, there was a way to save the situation-the Quinnells could no longer let Wynter be part of the family.

They had to end the banquet early since the capital would never accept it if the news broke out.

There were such examples in reality.

The stock was worth more than 20 dollars per day, but it could plummet to a few dollars the next day.

This period was troubled. Nobody dared to bet on the stock price.

For a moment, everyone's gaze focused on Wynter. The discussion became louder, including the major shareholders present.

Wendy's pride could hardly be hidden.

Tobias' expression darkened. But before he could step forward, Wynter smiled. She looked at Wendy nonchalantly and said, "I did design the outfits. But how did you conclude that! plagiarized them?"

"It's so similar! I'm sure it's plagiarism!" Wendy nearly lost control and revealed her true colors.

Naomi calmed her down in time and said pitifully, "Enough, Wendy. Sevie had just returned and couldn't change some habits for a while. She didn't mean it."

"Naomi, she has humiliated you. How could you still speak for her!" Wendy seemed to be seeking justice. Plagiarism isn't a trivial issue. She must admit her mistake!"

Wynter calmly asked, "Have you finished speaking?"

he's too arrogant!" Someone shook his head.

Shane walked up and yelled, "Sevie, apologize!"

"Why should Wynter apologize?"

Elliot, who had never spoken, stood before him. "You brought a sponsee here to steal Wynter's spotlight and make a show. I don't mind being cruel as well.

"If you want to be CEO, you must support Wynter. If you don't want to, the six of us can take Grandpa's test to determine who is qualified for your position."

Shane never expected that his fifth son, who had always been quiet, would say such words in public..

That indicated that all of the Quinnells' scions were dissatisfied with him as their father!

There was a lot of noise around him. Shane's expression was almost livid.

"You're making a big fuss by protecting her. We won't be able to save the situation even if Dad comes to apologize!"

He believed Wynter plagiarized a well-known designer.

"You don't need to worry about this, Mr. Quinnell."

Wynter stood beside Elliot. "Mr. Quinnell, Ms. Winston, and that sponsee.

Despite my explanation, you all insisted that I was plagiarizing. You all seem to want to humiliate me."

No wonder some of her dreams were so counterintuitive.

She was alone at the banquet, and there were traps everywhere, which she couldn't avoid because nobody would listen to her explanation.

People would even dislike her if Shane claimed she was ungrateful.

Wynter's expression darkened as she thought about that. "It's a pity that I have to disappoint you. As you can see, my design is the same as Lamar's. Because I'm Lamar."

Her last sentence was spoken clearly and confidently, enough for everyone present to hear it.

In an instant, the scene appeared to explode.

"What did she say? She's Lamar?"

"How can this be?"

The first person to question Wynter wasn't Wendy, but the ladies.

Chapter 559 Brothers Come Forward

People came up with all sorts of gossip. Someone remarked, "Look at her age. Lamar is a Frendan. I heard she's a noble in Frenda."

It indicated that they didn't believe Wynter.

Wendy couldn't help but laugh. "Ms. Sevie, if you want to escape the embarrassment, say something more plausible. Lamar is indeed mysterious, but everyone knows that she was born Frenda. Her outfit design has always been exotic. If you want to pretend to be her, you must be similar to her."

Wynter responded calmly, "Have you met Lamar? Did you hear her say she's Frendan?"

"I-" Wendy couldn't retort.

Wynter smiled lightly and said purposefully, "You haven't seen or heard from her. People present also mentioned it. Those are all rumors. I used to design outfits with an exotic style because I wanted to make money overseas.

"I didn't expect the strongest demand to be from Shumland. The less I do, the higher the price I fetched. I only intended to earn some tuition fees. It seems that many of you support me."

Her attitude shocked the ladies and made them hesitate.

After all, they could see Lamar's style was unorthodox. Otherwise, she wouldn't be able to create gothic- style outfits.

Wendy only found it ridiculous. "Will Lamar be short of tuition fees? Do you think everyone is like you, a part-time college student?"

"Wendy!" Naomi wanted to stop her.

Wendy thought she shouldn't have to keep quiet at this point. "Naomi, compared to you, she is a puddle of mud! She's only a shameless thief who wants to climb the social ladder!

"I don't understand what the Quinnells are thinking about. How could they not want you but a mischievous bumpkin! She's so shameless to say she's Lamar!" Right then, a voice sounded, "Whether it's Lamar's design or not, I can tell only by looking at the outfits."

It was Winnie Yeaton. As a well-known local and international artist, her paintings and furniture designs were always renowned.

This time, she returned to Shumland for work reasons. People in the circle didn't expect that she would show up.

Her schedule should include interviews with the mainstream media.

After all, she had achieved a good reputation among the local and international communities.

Her "Shumland Marriage" project referred to things in a museum in a certain country that were all Shumland's.

The "Shumland Marriage" even sold for more than 10 million at the auction. It showed Winnie's status in the art world. What she said represented authority and genuineness.

"Winnie, what brought you here?" Naomi looked surprised.

She strode forward and took Winnie's arm affectionately.

Winnie patted her hand. "The Quinnells found their long-lost daughter. Of course, I'll come. I also want to see if your mother's biological daughter has any misunderstandings about you."

Misunderstandings?

Wynter smiled and glanced at Winnie meaningfully.

Naomi was full of grievance. "I'm not afraid of any misunderstanding. I'm just worried that Sevie will go astray."

Tobias and Elliot knew Winnie. They frowned, subconsciously wanting to protect Wynter.

Winnie was stunned when she saw that. "Toby, Lio, it's me. Why are you also hostile to me?"

Elliot gazed at her. "These are the Quinnells' family affairs. Outsiders shouldn't interfere."

Winnie sighed. "I know you two don't want to see your sister being wronged, but Naomi did nothing wrong. Without her, your mother might-"

Chapter 560 Wynter Proves Her Identity

Winnie halted for a moment.

She then looked at Wynter standing there. "Your eyes are like Marie's. Nice to meet you, Sevie. I'm Winnie Yeaton. You can call me Ms. Yeaton. I hugged you when you were a child.

"You did misunderstand Naomi, but it's not your fault. After all, you've been away for many years from home. When you returned, your parents didn't pay much attention to you. I understand you can't accept it for a while."

Winnie seemed to want to stroke Wynter's head. "You were naughty when you were young. If you made a mistake, you have a chance to seek forgiveness. But if you don't, I won't let anyone slander you. I promise it with my reputation. Let me see your dress."

She was thinking about a way to eliminate Wynter's hostility.

Since Wynter returned, Tobias and Elliot seemed different from before.

But on such occasions, they had to think about their mother.

Marie wouldn't want to see either Naomi or Wynter in trouble.

Winnie glanced at everyone. "You all should believe what I say. When I was at Frenda, I had contact with Lamar's brand. I know things that ordinary people don't know."

"Ms. Yeaton, we all believe you."

A lady smiled. Her voice was gentle as if she were attempting to smooth things over.

"It doesn't matter whether it's a knockoff. Children all have vanity. Marie isn't here today. We should give her daughter a chance."

Wynter's smile faded as that lady spoke, and her hand stopped fiddling with the purple sugilite pendant.

She looked in the direction of that lady-and she found the voice that appeared in her dream.

"Sevie, lower your head. Let me see the back of your neck," Winnie said kindly.

Wynter smiled. "So, you're my mother's friend?"

"Yes, without your mother, I wouldn't have my achievements." Winnie never shied away from this point.

Wynter didn't understand. "Since you're my mother's friend, how can you help an outsider while embarrassing her biological daughter? My mother is sick. But given her style of doing things, she won't approve of you doing this."

When Winnie heard that, she paused and wanted to explain.

Wendy sneered. "You just don't want Ms. Yeaton to check your dress! You're afraid that it'll turn out to be fake! Your plagiarism charges will be proven!"

"I don't like to bow my head." Wynter stared at Winnie and pointedly stated, "My mother is the same."

Maybe I don't look like her in appearance, but we have similar personalities.

There are various ways to prove whether I'm Lamar."

Wendy yelled, "You're just making excuses!"

Wynter ignored her and made a phone call in front of everyone.

She spoke in Frendese, "You can post those outfits that I designed yesterday."

"Really? Oh my God! Lamar, are you serious? Can I post it?"
