

Chapter 265 The Last Match

"Excuse me, Mr. Brustin, are you leaving?" Merrick asked.

"Where are you going? When will you be back?" Lindsey also asked.

The children pulled long faces and tugged Aloys' arms, keeping him by their sides with a barrage of questions.

Melissa watched them and smiled.

Aloys had been a part of her children's lives since they were born. They had deep attachments to each other.

Now Aloys was about to leave, the atmosphere was tainted with sadness.

Aloys narrowed his eyes and smiled gently. "I won't be gone for long. If you listen to your mommy, I'll bring plenty of gifts when I return."

"Well, that's settled," Melissa said. "Presents win every time."

"Okay, let's pinky swear," the children agreed.

Aloys and the children then hooked their pinkies. The kids seemed a little happier. They played with Aloys for a long time before they reluctantly allowed him to leave.

Melissa walked Aloys to the door. "Aloys, tell me if you encounter any difficulties. I will try my best to help you."

"Just take care of yourself and those two sweet children. Call my people if there's an emergency. My people will get here quickly."

And... wait for me to come back. Aloys said this in his heart as he looked at her in his rearview mirror.

The next day, Melissa arrived at the hospital early to prepare for the competition.

There was a lot at stake. The result would determine whether she and Leilany could stay in this hospital. She refused to let Leilany down.

The competition site was lively, and many doctors came to watch.

Everyone in the hospital heard about the bet between Melissa and those senior doctors, and knew how important it was.

"Melissa," Vivienne called. She stood in the corner with the two children and Johnny.

"Why are you all here?" Melissa asked, hurrying to greet them. "You didn't need to come. It's just a small competition."

"It's our pleasure. Lindsey and Merrick don't need to go to school today, so we thought we'd make it a family day out," Johnny replied, smiling.

"Yes, Mommy. Merrick and I want to watch your competition," Lindsey said.

Merrick said, "Mommy, you're the best. You'll win for sure."

The two kids were dressed in similar outfits, blue and white sportswear.

They looked cute and were even sweeter when they spoke.

Many people looked at them affectionately. Melissa squatted to kiss them. "Well, I am ready for anything now."

The loudspeaker announced the rules of the competition. "Senior doctors, please get ready. In the final round, you will treat real patients. The patients are volunteers."

"Go ahead," Vivienne said, holding the children's hands. She then looked down at the kids. "Let's cheer for your mommy."

"Okay. Mommy, you've got this!"

The kids shouted and waved. They looked tiny in the crowd, but everyone wanted to hold and kiss them.

Smiling, Melissa waved back and walked toward the judges.

Arielle saw all of this. She hid in a nearby corner, eyes narrowed, filled with jealousy and resentment.

If Melissa hadn't survived and returned with her children, Arielle would be the one talking and laughing with Vivienne and Johnny.

However, there was still time. Her sinister smile spoiled Arielle's beauty.
