

Chapter 495 Find The Secret

Merrick's face reddened. He awkwardly stood still for a while before heading back into his room.

"Merrick is shy. He always acts like this," Lindsey stood there chuckling. This was not the first time. She laughed every time she saw her brother this way. Melissa laughed with her as well.

"What is it that's so funny? Please tell me, I'd like to laugh as well," Everett joked. He'd heard the laughter the instant he walked into the house.

"It's nothing. We were teasing Merrick for his shyness," Lindsey said.

Everett easily caught on. It seemed Merrick had just displayed some of his sheepish mannerisms. Merrick seemed like a very self-assured, confident boy, but when one got to know him, one would find out he was actually very reserved. Lindsey was a big extrovert, but Merrick was an introvert. In some ways, Merrick was just like him.

"You came back early today, Mr. Mayfield," Lindsey clung to Everett's leg, her adorable, wide eyes staring up at him.

Everett's heart felt warm. He reached out and gently caressed her hair before he picked her up and pinched her nose. "I missed my little princess, so I rushed home."

Lindsey let out a happy giggle at this, and Melissa's heart warmed as she watched the sweet scene before her.

Perhaps this was indeed the meaning of the term, "blood is thicker than water." Everett and Lindsey's relationship was so natural. The love in their eyes, when they looked at each other, was so clear and pure.

Everett passed Lindsey to the servant, and then looked hesitant as he turned to Melissa. It was clear he wanted to say something.

"You clearly have something on your mind, so just say it. Staying quiet isn't your style, you know," Melissa teased.

"You told Mona to come back tomorrow. Are you going to visit the Carters?"

Melissa had given Mona a holiday. Mona was so adamant about protecting Melissa all the time. But Melissa didn't need Mona following her everywhere. She was safe as long as she stayed in Andeport. She only hired a bodyguard because she needed protection when she went to Timton.

"Yes. I'm going to see the Carters," Melissa answered truthfully.

Everett's expression changed when he heard this. "Alright. You need enough protection. And make sure you return immediately after you get the medicine. I will get someone to watch over you while you are in Timton."

Melissa was touched by Everett's concern for her. "I will, of course. As for the kids, please watch over them well for me."

"That's a given. They are my children, after all."

"The Carter family in Timton? What is Melissa doing there?" Keira had been putting on a mask but tore it off when she heard the news. She stared at Arielle in confusion.

Timton was so far away from where they were. Plus, it wasn't like there were any famous hospitals there. So why there of all places?

Arielle's tone was firm. "I asked Dora to put some drugs on a knife. Melissa was hurt by that knife, so my guess is that she went there looking for the antidote."

"Antidote?" Keira did not know about this. She asked Arielle for all the details and then finally understood the whole matter.

Keira's eyes narrowed. "If your information is correct, then Melissa is seriously poisoned as of right now. She's going to die without the antidote, right?"
