

Chapter 558 A Strange Middle-Aged Man

"What?" Keira walked over to a quiet, isolated corner in shock. "Why did she get the antidote all of a sudden? What happened?"

"I'm not sure exactly, but she's doing fine now," Arielle said.

Keira tightly clutched her phone in anger. She got angrier as she remembered how Melissa had humiliated her. She took a deep breath and said, "I'll never let Melissa get away with this, never!"

The sports meeting came to an end and all parents and children were ready to head back to the classroom.

"We'll be heading to the classroom now, dear parents. You will be briefed on all daily activities," the teacher said and led the parents and children to the classroom.

Lindsey and Merrick previously asked to be excused and went to the bathrooms, so by the time they got back, everyone had left the playground already. They turned to each other in confusion and then turned to head back to the classroom, but were suddenly stopped by a middle-aged man wearing a cap.

"Sorry, how can I get to Class 3 for the Juniors, please?"

Lindsey and Merrick were Class 3 students and Lindsey was one who was always so eager to help others. The moment she heard the man's question, her eyes lit up, ready to lead the way.

However, Merrick tapped Lindsey on the hand and responded with a straight face, "Outsiders are not allowed in our kindergarten, sir. It'd be best for you to register at the gate and then ask for instructions."

The man slightly lifted his cap from his face and narrowed his eyes at Merrick. Then he said in a harsh voice after a while, "Are you Merrick, Merrick Sherman?"

"No, I'm not. I'm Kasen Jensen."

Lindsey's eyes narrowed in confusion. Why was Merrick lying about who he was? She stayed quiet, though. Merrick was very smart. He always had a valid reason for everything.

The man pulled his cap back down to cover his face and said, "Kasen, I advise you to mind your own business from now on."

Merrick nodded. He would mind his business, and go straight to the security guards.

Then he responded out loud, "Yes, I won't meddle."

He quickly clutched Lindsey's hand and scurried away.

The man began walking away as well, but then stopped suddenly. He turned to look at the two children again, who were the same height. Their faces flashed through his mind again and he came to the realization that they had a striking resemblance.

He instantly pulled out his phone and his eyes widened when he saw the photos of the children.

Lindsey and Merrick, it was them! Damn it! The little bastards had managed to swindle him!

His heart sped up as he took off after them.

"Oh no! He knows it's us. Run!" Merrick ran with all his might, holding his sister's hand tightly the moment he saw the man coming after them. The security guards were close by; they just had to reach them.

Meanwhile, Melissa stood waiting for her children to return from the bathrooms. Minutes passed and they hadn't returned. Melissa couldn't help but feel anxious. With worry in mind, she told the head teacher and went to look for them outside.

She walked out of the classroom and immediately saw her two children running from an unknown man. Melissa felt shocked to her core and her legs were running before she even realized. She called Everett as she ran.

It was not possible for two small children to outrun an adult, not to
