

Chapter 606 Dismiss

"Sir, we've signed a contract before, but it didn't mention this term. Besides, I haven't done anything wrong medically. How can you just dismiss me without any proper reason?"

Melissa was determined to fight for justice because she believed the director had no grounds to fire her over this issue.

Seeing Melissa's aggression, the director also became defensive and said, "I'm the director and you're my employee. I can fire anyone I want. It's a private hospital. There aren't many rules. How dare you create such a commotion here?"

The director spoke forcefully.

Feeling hurt and helpless, Melissa thought to herself that the director and Howell were cut from the same cloth—impossible to reason with.

"Well, if that's how you feel, then I don't want to stay here anymore."

After saying that, Melissa stormed out of the office.

Mary sadly watched Melissa pack her things while leaning against the door.

"How could it be so serious? Our director is usually approachable. Why don't you try begging him again? I'm sure he'll let you stay."

Melissa knew Mary didn't want her to leave, but it was obvious that the director had made up his mind. No one could change his mind.

She forced a bitter smile and replied, "Forget it. He's made up his mind to fire me. There's nothing I can do."

"But why?" Mary sobbed. Clearly, she didn't want Melissa to go.

"It doesn't matter, Mary. Farewell."

Melissa bid farewell to her colleagues and left the hospital.

Emily observed Melissa from a distance. When she saw Melissa coming out, she hurried over to her.

"Melissa, why did you finish work so early today? Aren't you busy with your tasks?" Emily asked.

Looking at the pretentious Emily, Melissa scoffed, "I've been fired now. Are you happy?"

"What?"

Emily's expression changed instantly.

Fired? Why? Why did the director do that?

How could this happen? She only caused a scene once. How could Melissa be fired?

"Melissa, you're talented. How could your director give up on you so easily? Why did he suddenly fire you? Is there some kind of misunderstanding?"

As Melissa gazed at Emily's hypocritical face, she found it amusing. She sneered, "Thanks to you."

With a mocking tone, she walked ahead, carrying her belongings.

Emily's heart skipped a beat. It seemed that Melissa had been fired because of her actions.

Though Emily initially intended it, she had since changed her mind.

When she learned about Arielle's sufferings in prison, Emily realized that it was Melissa's way of seeking revenge.

What if Melissa, frustrated by her dismissal, instructed the inmates in the prison to harm her daughter?

Anxious thoughts flooded Emily's mind, compelling her to run toward Melissa without even realizing it.

"Melissa, I went to your hospital a few days ago because I had no other option. I never expected to cause you such a significant problem."

"Didn't expect?"

Melissa didn't believe her for a moment.

She turned to face Emily calmly. "What exactly do you want to say? You have five minutes. I need to get home."
