

Chapter 634 Find Melissa

Vivienne sighed. "It's not your fault, really. Perhaps it's just fate."

She bent down and gently brushed her hand through the hair of Lindsey and Merrick.

In unison, the children's tear-filled eyes met Vivienne's, a question trembling on their lips.

"Mrs. Mayfield, is Mommy dead?"

"The news reported your mother as missing, not dead. So you must keep faith in her. She loves you and wouldn't recklessly put herself in harm's way."

Both children nodded in agreement. "Mommy will be okay."

That night, Vivienne feared the children would stay awake into the early hours, lost in worry.

So she decided to keep them company in their room.

Despite her efforts, they lay wide-eyed, thoughts filled with Melissa.

They both harbored the same hope that they would open their eyes the next day to find Melissa smiling at them.

Meanwhile, in the disaster-stricken zone, Everett was ceaselessly searching for Melissa, neglecting rest and nourishment.

Within just a day, Everett had significantly lost weight.

Observing Everett's tireless pursuit for Melissa, one of Everett's subordinates feared for his well-being.

With concern, he suggested, "Mr. Mayfield, you should rest. If you continue like this, you'll fall ill, and what good would that be when Mrs. Mayfield is found? You haven't eaten since yesterday. How will you sustain yourself?"

"I'm fine."

Everett remained indifferent to his own health; his sole focus was on finding Melissa.

Just past midday, the heat of the sun shimmered on the water, lulling people into a stupor.

Everett's subordinate had just moored the boat, ready to rest ashore, when he realized that Everett was missing from the vessel!

His heart raced as he recalled Everett being on the boat just moments ago. How could he have vanished? They were in the middle of the water; where else could he have gone?

A horrifying possibility dawned on him. After he swiftly turned his gaze to the water, his worst fear was confirmed. Everett was drifting downstream!

In his exhaustive search for Melissa, Everett must have succumbed to fatigue and blacked out.

The subordinate tried to intercept Everett in his boat, but the rapid current was unforgiving. By the time he reached Everett's last seen location, Everett was nowhere to be found!

Everett's eyes fluttered open. He had inadvertently fallen into the water and choked, which led to him blacking out.

As he took in his surroundings, he was momentarily disoriented.

"You're finally awake?"

The sound of a familiar voice made Everett turn his head. He was overjoyed to see Melissa beside him.

Instinctively, he clung onto her hand and hoarsely uttered, "Melissa, I've finally found you. Even if we were dead, I wouldn't regret it. I'll never leave your side again."

Melissa was at a loss for words.

"Well, I haven't quite had my fill of life yet. Let's live another 70 years from now."

Everett was stunned.

Getting to his feet, he realized they were in a cave with the floodwaters just in front of it.

He must have been carried in by the current.

"So, you've been trapped here all this time?"

