

Chapter 1490 Go On Their Way

---

Hilliard gave a cold snort but recognized the gravity of the situation, so he refrained from arguing with Liam.

If his actions resulted in Nocturne's law power falling into the Dremer race's hands, he would be branded a traitor to the entire Human Clan. That was not something he wanted.

As the stakes of the bet between Liam and Hilliard were established, Cataleya approached Liam with a playful smile. "Liam, you better bring your A-game! When we return, you should definitely teach Hilliard a lesson; he is really annoying sometimes."

Liam found himself speechless, unsure how to respond to that.

At that moment, Alexis asked, "Liam, what's the current status of the law power?"

Given that everyone had acknowledged Liam's spiritual power, Alexis' question was a natural follow-up.

Liam, prompted by Alexis to focus on the crucial issue, momentarily set aside his rivalry with Hilliard to concentrate on the law power.

His earlier exchange with Hilliard was strategically designed to ensure that, once they found Nocturne's law power, Hilliard would put aside his minor grievances.

The unity of their team was critical for surviving the secret realm and emerging safely.

Continued animosity from Hilliard could lead to dangerous complications.

When Liam tried to sense the law power of Nocturne again, his expression turned grave.

The group instantly tensed, sensing from Liam's demeanor that something had happened.

Cataleya, concerned, quickly asked, "Liam, what have you discovered?"

Liam replied, "It seems the Dremer race's team has also discovered our whereabouts, and they've accelerated their pace. We need to move faster!"

As Liam finished speaking, the faces of Cataleya and the others hardened with renewed urgency.

Previously, the sense of haste hadn't been as pressing. The Human Clan, unlike other races, was equipped with advanced Primogem equipment, including flying devices that could significantly enhance one's mobility.

However, the revelation that their location might have already been compromised, prompting the Dremer race's team to quicken their advance, injected a dose of anxiety into the group.

They knew the Dremer race's team's full-speed pursuit meant that their technological edge no longer held much of an advantage.

Recognizing the critical nature of the current situation, Liam immediately took the lead to move, guiding the group toward their destination.

For this mission, each member was equipped with flying devices powered by Primogem-King-level technology, a precaution mandated by Caden. This foresight proved invaluable at this crucial juncture.

Liam's focus remained sharply attuned to the movements of the Dremer race's team and the condition of Nocturne's law power.

When Liam noticed the Dremer race's team nearing their goal, a spike of urgency shot through him. He quickly said to the others, "The Dremer race's team is almost there; we have to intercept them. Everyone, I'll go ahead of you now."

With that declaration, Liam's aura flared impressively. His power surged, propelling his flying device to speeds that quickly distanced him from his companions.

Liam was tapping into the Death Power domain, which significantly amplified his abilities within its scope, enhancing his speed as well.

However, since Liam hadn't extensively used the Death Power domain, Cataleya and the rest were left puzzled, unable to pinpoint the technique he was using.

