

Chapter 1558 Seeing The Soulsky Clan's Emissary

Liam's curiosity got the better of him as he quickly agreed to Cecil's proposition.

The monotony of his room at the Vaughn estate had been wearing on him, making Cecil's invitation a welcome diversion.

Liam followed Cecil, and they crept along the mansion's walls, their footsteps barely making a sound against the ground.

"Why are we walking like thieves in your own home?" Liam whispered, his confusion evident.

Cecil said, "My uncle and some others heard that the Soulsky Clan sent an emissary for our great-grandmother's birthday. They were adamant about keeping us young Vaughns away from the person, though I'm not privy to their reasons. This path helps us avoid the family servants' watchful eyes."

Liam furrowed his brows but didn't find the situation particularly unusual.

The Soulsky Clan had carved out a unique reputation in the Cosmic realm, known for their philosophy of universal acceptance. Their doors stood open to all races, a beacon of inclusion in an often-divided world.

This progressive stance attracted countless individuals from across the Cosmic realm, each seeking sanctuary or fresh perspectives within the clan's welcoming embrace. The Soulsky Clan's unconditional acceptance had fostered a tapestry of cultures and races under their banner.

Naturally, this included many from the Human Clan who had chosen to switch allegiances. Liam suspected this might be why the Vaughn elders sought to shield their younger generation from the Soulsky Clan's influence.

Yet neither he nor Cecil harbored any thoughts of leaving the Human Clan, so they dismissed these concerns.

After a few minutes of careful navigation, Liam and Cecil reached the outer boundaries of the Vaughn estate.

A cluster of eager young faces greeted them. People immediately swarming around Cecil with palpable excitement. "Cecil, let's go! If we're late, there might not be any seats left!"

Scanning the assembled group, Liam spotted Cataleya.

It dawned on him that his and Cecil's curiosity about the Soulsky Clan wasn't isolated—every young member of the Vaughn family seemed eager to see the emissary.

Cecil sprang into action without hesitation. "The Soulsky Clan's emissary is conducting a lesson beyond our planetary system."

In one fluid motion, he retrieved a foldable spaceship, its structure gracefully unfurling as he infused it with primogem energy.

The group quickly boarded, and Cecil piloted them swiftly beyond their planetary system's boundaries.

They soon arrived at their destination where the Soulsky Clan's emissary was sharing their wisdom.

The scene before them struck Liam as peculiar—a sea of faces all wearing identical expressions of tranquil understanding. Their features were devoid of any other emotion.

A slight frown creased Liam's forehead as he observed this uniformity.

The audience's unwavering attention suggested that the Soulsky Clan emissary's teachings held profound significance.

Such focused dedication could only be inspired by truly meaningful content.

Witnessing these rapt expressions only strengthened Cecil's and the others' faith in the Soulsky Clan's teachings.

Cecil leaned over and whispered to Liam, "See, Liam? Just like I said! The Soulsky Clan's emissary's teachings are truly amazing. Let's find a place to sit down and listen!"

At that moment, none noticed how the mention of Liam's name caused a ripple of interest across the emissary's serene countenance. He was seated cross-legged at the center of the crowd, and he began casting Liam subtle glances.

