Chapter 443 A Free Lesson

At the other end, Joshua looked at his phone after August hung up on him. The smile froze on his face and a cold light flickered in his eyes.

He put away the phone and turned directly to a man next to him and looked at the stereo.

Noticing his gaze, the man immediately understood and hastily turned off the stereo that was playing deafening techno music.

Joshua took a deep breath and said, "Send some men to look for Lucia."

His men were a little confused. "Well..."

A trace of fatigue crossed Joshua's face and he said indifferently, "Go. Just look around and come back." His men immediately nodded and stepped away.

When they left, Joshua was left alone in the room. He unhurriedly lit a cigarette and took a long drag. The cloud of smoke obscured the opaque look in his eyes.

All of this was about to end.

Two hours later, a black car sped down the road and went straight to West Bridge.

With the sound of the brakes, the car stopped not far away from West Bridge. When its door was pushed open, someone was thrown out of the car and fell to the side of the road.

The next second, the door was closed. Immediately after that, the car turned around and sped away at once. Lucia was lying on the ground, limp but still conscious. Her hair covered her face and she was in a mess. What had happened an hour ago was like a nightmare that went through her mind over and over again. She took a deep breath. The voice in her head told her to crawl forward, but her legs and hands felt like they were broken, and she couldn't get any strength at all.

She raised her eyes to look at the red mark on her finger. With a lump in her throat, she couldn't help but burst into tears.

She gritted her teeth and the pain made her sober up a bit. She took a deep breath, moved her arms on the ground, and pulled herself slowly forward while crawling.

One inch, two inches, three inches....

Looking at the iron gates over there, she braced herself to get slowly closer to the home of her dream bit by bit.

The light was on in the living room, and to her, it was like a small orange lantern in the dead of night, giving her warmth and hope.

Palms were scratched by stones and her knees were bloodied. Despite the pain, she just wanted to get there.
