Chapter 530 A Double Loss

The next day, after August returned to Austos, the battle between him and Bishop officially began.

In the huge president's office of the Lion Group, Bishop leisurely played with the pen in his hand while listening to his subordinate reporting the latest price quotes to him.

"The row of shops at No. 307 Riverside Street in the center of the north of the city has received several inquiries since last night. The quote is..."

After listening for a while, Bishop raised his hand to call for a stop and said softly, "You don't need to report the rest to me. The deadline is this noon. Choose the most suitable client among all interested parties and confirmed with them this afternoon. We will sign the contract tomorrow."

The subordinate was a little surprised to hear this, so he said, "Why are you in such a hurry? Mr. Adams, I'm afraid we won't be able to get the most favorable price if..."

Bishop raised his eyebrows and said deprecatingly, "It doesn't matter. Just do as I say."

Even though the subordinate was full of suspicions, he could say nothing no object now. After all, his boss had made the decision. So, he could only take the order and leave.

As soon as he walked out, Bishop looked at Bob and asked, "Where will Olivia go today? Report it to me."

"Today is the day of her routine medical examination. I have already sent people to follow her. She will return to the old house after the examination in the hospital."

"Okay." Bishop paused and then asked, "Is there anything unusual?"

"Everything has been normal by now."

"Good." Bishop casually put down the pen and murmured, "You must keep a close eye on her. She can be regarded as a trump card."
