Chapter 71

Seeing how determined her daughter looked, Mrs.Mitchell held back what she was trying to say at last.

Lucia looked up and smiled at them.

"But don't worry.

I'll be fine."

Hearing that, Mr.and Mrs.Mitchell were secretly relieved.

After eating a few pieces of fruit, Lucia went back to her room, put on her earphones, and continued reading.

A while later, some noise suddenly came from outside.

Taking off her earphones, Lucia walked to the door and pushed it open to see Mrs.Mitchell standing at the entrance and talking to someone outside.

"Please, Elisa, I want to see Lucia."

Hearing this familiar voice, Lucia froze and then hurriedly walked over.

Mrs.Mitchell replied in a serious tone, "It's not that I won't let you see her, Auntie.

Lucia is in terrible shape now."

"Mom?"

Lucia walked to the door.

She was stunned to see Grandma standing outside.

Grandma saw Lucia and her eyes instantly lit up.

"Lucia!"

Lucia promptly asked, "What brings you here, Grandma?"

"I just heard abbut your divorce from August.

I'm so pissed off.

How could he go behind my back?"

Grandma slapped her thigh in anger.

Lucia realized what was going on when she heard that.

She took a deep breath and hastily walked up to help Grandma into the room.

"Grandma, come in and talk.

Although she and August had already divorced, there was no reason to keep the old lady outside the door.

Mrs. Mitchell saw that Lucia had made a decision, so she turned around to go and make tea without saying anything more.

After helping Grandma sit down on the couch, Lucia asked with some surprise, "Did you come here by yourself, Grandma?"

Although Lucia hadn't gone to the old house very often, she knew that Grandma always traveled with her men.

They didn't dare to do that in general, but how did Grandma know? August thought about the question and failed to find an answer.

As he watched the car run onto the main road, he took out his phone and called Lucia directly.

After a few beeps, she finally answered at the other end.

The woman's voice came, sounding a bit cold.

"Hello?"

Hearing the impatience in her tone, August subconsciously frowned and asked in the same cold way, 'Is Grandma with you?"

Hearing that, Lucia at the other end turned to look at the white-haired old lady, who was sleeping on her small floral bed, and replied quietly, "Yeah."

August frowned and asked in a deep voice, "Then why didn't you call and tell me?"

Grandma was so old that she usually had someone with her when she went out.

However, she was out alone all afternoon today.

He had been worried about her all the time.

However, Lucia didn't even call and tell him that Grandma was with her! Lucia heard the reproach in the man's tone.

Her grip on the phone tightened a bit as she frowned and asked in a deep voice, "Why should I call you? It's your responsibility to watch over Grandma, isn't it?"

Her questions caught him off guard and August actually found himself speechless.

Anger flickered in his cold eyes as he said in a cold voice, "I'm coming over now."

After that, he directly hung up the phone.

Lucia looked at the interface showing that he had hung up on her.

She was both angry and annoyed.

He had the impudence to blame her when he was responsible for it.

What the hell? Putting away his phone, August ordered with a cold face, "Drive faster."

Burton immediately said yes.

He gingerly raised his eyes and glanced at August in the rearview mirror, feeling nervous.

He rarely saw August so angry and couldn't tell if the man was angry with the old lady or with Lucia.

The car ran at high speed down the road and finally arrived at the entrance of Lucia's neighborhood.

August got out of the car and rushed to Lucia's home.

He suppressed the anger in his heart as he raised his hand to knock on the door.

"Click."

The door opened and Lucia was there.

She saw the man standing outside in a steelgray suit, which looked distinctive with his upright figure.

She didn't want August to go out with half of his face swollen.

People in the neighborhood who didn't know what had happened would probably think she had beaten him up.

She took a deep breath and said in a deep voice, "I'll do it for you before you go."

His eyes lit up inconspicuously.

August looked up at her and he seemed to be a little puzzled by her reaction.

Lucia gritted her teeth and pretended to be calm as she explained, 'It's a bad idea for you to go out like this.'

Hearing that, August realized it too.

He paused, stepped over, and sat down in the chair without refusing.

Lucia unscrewed the cap, squeezed some ointment onto her slender finger, and walked over to August.

She hesitated and then slowly applied it to his face where it was red and swollen.

With her fingertip, she gently rubbed the ointment into the swollen place in slow circles, but he still inevitably felt some pain.

Grandma had given him a good slap.

With his brows knitted, August felt the slight stinging pain in his cheek.

And the refreshing smell of the ointment lingered around his nose, mixed with the sweet scent from the woman.

Lucia tried to apply the ointment as evenly as possible.

After all that, she gently leaned over and blew on the injured area.

Every time Lucia was injured when she was a child, Mrs. Mitchell would blow on it like this after applying the ointment to her, and then the pain would be gone.

Lucia had gotten into the same habit.

It seemed that August hadn't expected her to suddenly come closer.

He only felt cooler in his cheek as she blew and the pain was immediately relieved a lot, but the next second, his heart fluttered and even his back involuntarily tensed.

With her sweet smell around his nose, August found himself burning inside, with an indescribable dry and hot sensation.

This woman had no idea how risky it was to do so! Before he reacted, Lucia had already straightened up. She screwed the cap back on and said indifferently, "It's done."

August regained his composure and frowned involuntarily before he stood up.

"Burton and the others are still waiting for you outside."

Seeing she didn't say anything for a long time, Mrs.Mitchell looked up at her, "Do you hear me?"

Lucia took a deep breath and said softly, "Mom, I still think I have to tell him the truth.

If all of us are keeping the truth from each other, what's the point of going on a blind date."

At that, Mrs.Mitchell sighed, "I'm afraid you'll be bullied!"

It was not long, but she had been married after all.

Lucia smiled crookedly at her, "Mom, don't worry and I won't be like what I was before."

She was so stupid before and she didn't even know what was going on when she was being used.

"Well, forget it and it's time for you to go."

Not wanting to talk about the past, Mrs. Mitchell picked up her handbag and handed it to her.

Lucia glanced at the time, smiled crookedly, and went out.

After looking at the address on her phone, Lucia called a taxi and went directly to the coffee shop, Blue Mountain Coffee, they had arranged.

Lucia walked to the door and for some reason, August's face suddenly flashed in her mind, as if time had shifted back to the moment when they met first.

Could it be that her flash marriage to August had left a dating shadow on her? Lucia smiled bitterly and shook his head helplessly.

After adjusting her state, she pushed open the door of the coffee shop and walked in.

The coffee shop had a nice ambiance, with teal booths and brown wooden tables.

After taking a fast look around, she found that most of the customers had company.

Only in the window seat sat a man, handsome, gentle.

Seemingly sensing her gaze, the man also looked up at her.

The moment when their eyes met, the man smiled crookedly at her.

Lucia froze and hesitated.

She hadn't decided whether to go back to the Lion Group to work.

No matter what, it was also August's company.

If she went back, she would often see him and it would be awkward.

Carter hurriedly continued to ask, "I heard you had a fall at home and were hospitalized.

How are you doing now? Can you come to work?"

Lucia hesitated, "I feel better now, but..."

Not waiting for her to finish her sentence, Carter said, "Lucia, can you come back to work tomorrow? We've been so busy lately that our department is short of hands, and I'll be relieved if you can come back.

What's more, it's the end of the second quarter of the year and I can apply for a salary increase for you."

Salary increase? Lucia became so excited.

Lion Group offered two salary increases each year, one at mid-year and one at the end of the year.

Although she hadn't achieved much in the past two years, she had been working hard to make money.

And she had waited six months for such an opportunity, so she couldn't miss it.

Besides, the Lion Group's salary was already very good in the industry, and she might not be able to find a job with such a high salary afterward.

If she left at this time, she would be at a disadvantage.

Biting her lip, Lucia dispelled the few remaining misgivings and spoke, "Carter, I'll be able to go to work tomorrow.' Hearing her say that, Carter sighed in relief, "Okay, then you can come to work tomorrow."

After hanging up the phone, Lucia took a deep breath and continued to walk home.

As soon as Lucia got home, Mrs.Mitchell took her by the hand and asked her, "How was the boy?"

Lisa seemed to have expected her to ask this question, and she rightly said, "I'm going to check the projections again, otherwise none of us can afford to take responsibility for any problems."

Hearing her say so, Lucia did not say much and walked out of the conference room in the direction of the Archives.

Some confidential documents in the company were usually kept in the Archives for unified management, which could prevent the leakage of trade secrets and ensure the safety of a lot of information.

That's why they could only pick up the planning cases when the foreign guests were about to arrive.

When arriving at Archives, Lucia identified herself and signed.

After that, she took the planning cases with the archivist, and then rushed to the conference room.

It took a lot of time to get the planning cases from the Archives.

When Lucia arrived at the conference room, the foreign guests had just arrived and were not yet seated, so the scene was a bit chaotic.

Lucia stood at the entrance and looked around without seeing August, which made her sigh with relief.

The Lion Group's representatives, as well as Irene and Mary, were inviting the foreign guests to take their seats.

And Lucia was walking inside with the planning cases in her arms without paying attention to her surroundings as she was only thinking of distributing the plans to everyone as soon as possible.

She took a few steps, but before she reached the conference table, she suddenly fell forward unawares.

With a "bang", she fell to the ground all of a sudden, and the stack of planning cases she was holding in her arms was thrown away and scattered all over.

The people who were communicating in low voices heard the sound and turned their heads to follow the sound.

"Well, just do as I arranged."

August instructed Burton with a sideways glance.

When walking to the door of the conference room, he turned his head to see Lucia lying on the floor, papers spilled everywhere.

When he saw the foreign guests with different looks, his face instantly became somber.

Burton reported to him early in the morning that Lucia was back at work.

Lucia immediately turned her head, but the moment when she avoided looking at him, she was a little worried.

Did he catch her peeking at him? She bit her lip and forced herself to concentrate on the minutes of the meeting, August found Lucia a little flustered, ears slightly red and a few seconds later, he faintly smiled crookedly.

Finally, the meeting ended successfully, and both sides were happy.

As it was almost time for dinner, the representatives from both sides naturally had to have a meal together.

Only after the crowd left did Lucia leave the conference room along with the secretaries, Looking at the people walking away.

she secretly breathed a sigh of relief.

Luckily, she had just completed her task successfully in the conference room.

After walking a few steps and seeing Lisa walking not far ahead, Lucia suddenly thought of her sudden fall in the conference room just now.

At that time, she was in a hurry and did not watch her step, but she found no obstacle on the ground when she stood up to pick up the file afterward.

She also remembered that Lisa was right behind her when she walked in with the documents in her arms.

It was also very likely that Lisa would have tripped her up at that time while everyone was still not seated.

After all, she was the only one around her at that time.

Lucia took a deep breath and opened her mouth to call out to her, "Lisa, wait a minute."

Hearing Lucia called her, Lisa stopped her steps, turned her head, and said coldly, "What is it?"

Looking more somber, Lucia took a few steps closer and said, "If I remember correctly, you were right next to me when I fell just now..."

Not waiting for Lucia to finish her sentence, Lisa spoke up and interrupted her directly, "Do you think I tripped you up? Lucia, don't just accuse people wrongly."

Hearing her say that, Lucia looked more somber, "I haven't even said anything yet.

I just wanted to ask why you didn't help me just now, but you say that.

Is it true that you tripped me?"

Once she heard these words, Lisa's face suddenly turned pale.

Then she raised her voice and said, "Don't you talk nonsense!"

Looking at the man's back, August unhappily pursed his lips, eyes darkened.

When the car slowly started, Burton also saw a familiar figure over there, so he subconsciously looked up through the rearview mirror to see August, asking with some hesitation, "President Adams, do you need me to stop."

August's face went cold and he forced himself to avert his gaze, "No."

Stopped for that woman? Seeing August's reaction like this, Burton secretly breathed a sigh of relief, stepped on the gas, and accelerated the car.

The car drove by fast, and not far from the roadside, Lucia was oblivious to what was going on inside the car.

A delivery guy came running fast, but Lucia had her head down and didn't even notice him.

When the delivery guy was about to hit Lucia, Paul suddenly reached out and pulled her away, "Watch out! With a burst of dizziness, Lucia fell into a wide embrace.

And she was just standing firm when a warm male voice reached her ears, "Are you okay?"

As soon as she looked up, she met his dark, shining eyes.

"I'm...

fine."

She unconsciously took a step back and pulled away from Paul.

For some reason, she suddenly felt a sense of guilt, and the face of another man flashed through her mind.

Why was she thinking about August at this time? With her eyebrows furrowing, Lucia almost wanted to pry open her head to see what was inside.

At this time, Paul's voice came to her ears, "Lucia, are you okay?"

She looked up at Paul and smiled shyly at him, "I'm...

okay.

Let's go."

Because of the limited lunch break, they simply ate at a nearby restaurant, and when it was time to go to work in the afternoon, Paul sent Lucia downstairs to the office as a gentleman.

Before leaving, Paul smiled crookedly and whispered, "It was a little rushed today and I'll make up for it some other time."

Chapter 79

She was so surprised that she unconsciously raised her voice which was sharp, with a few indescribable ambiguous accents.

They froze.

The moment when their eyes met, they were very awkward.

August gave her a cold look and spoke indifferently, "What do you think I want to do?"

With that he lifted his hand and put Lucia's calf on his lap, then without haste, he pulled the tea table drawer open and took out the bruise spray from it.

Lucia blushed, ashamed and bashful.

She thought he was going to do something to her...

August slowly opened the lid, aimed at Lucia's reddened knee, and directly pressed the nozzle.

When the cool liquid sprayed out, Lucia felt her knee cool a bit, then her calf involuntarily shrank back, and her face scrunched up.

Although the skin on her knee was not broken, it still stung a little when the medicine was sprayed on it.

August gave Lucia a look, picked up a cotton swab to wipe up the medicine that had run down, and said with a cold face, "You deserve it."

The medicine was sent to her but she didn't treat the wound herself.

So she deserved the pain.

Lucia froze, a little confused, "Wh-what?"

She couldn't have heard it wrong.

Ignoring her, August picked up the bottle and sprayed the wound again before releasing her ankle.

He packed his things while coldly saying, "Well, do not touch the water for a few days, and remember to spray medicine."

Lucia looked up just in time to see the perfect side of August's face.

His high nose was as sharp as a knife and his lips were pursed into a line, making others unconsciously feel he was so indifferent.

If August changed into a white coat at this time, he would definitely be an unbelievably eye-catching ascetic doctor.

With this idea flying through her mind, Lucia unconsciously blushed.

Seeing that Lucia didn't say anything for a long time, August turned his head and met the woman's eyes with a frown.

"Don't think too much."

Chapter 80

Lucia called a car and when she arrived at the other house, it was exactly half an hour later.
Lucia walked through the door and saw Turner tidying up the living room Turner saw her and a light flashed under her eyes, "Ms.
Mitchell...
you're here."
Lucia nodded at her and curled her lips into a smile, "I'm here to pick up my stuff."
"All your stuff is in the bedroom and I've packed it all up."

Let me go get it down for you."

Lucia said softly, "No, I'll just go by myself."

Although she hadn't lived here for long, she still had some affection for it.

Turner nodded and left her to fetch it herself.

Lucia took a deep breath, went up to the second floor, and returned to the bedroom.

Seeing the luggage placed at the end of the bed, she felt some complications.

Once her things were moved out, the room was suddenly a bit empty.

She took a deep breath, took her wedding ring and keys out of her pocket, and placed them gently on the desk.

She then pulled up her luggage and was about to leave.

This short marriage was really over here.

Biting her lip, Lucia couldn't help but feel a sourness in her heart when she thought of August and the woman behind him.

She expected so much from this marriage that she ended up being more disappointed.

Lucia pulled her suitcase, stepped out of the room, and was just about to close the door behind her when footsteps came from the corridor. As soon as she turned around, she saw a tall figure.

August stepped forward and frowned involuntarily when he saw the luggage Lucia was pulling in her hand.
