

Substitute B 263

Chapter 263: Hayden Crawford Spotted Her Instantly in the Crowd

When James Sawyer heard the news, he was racing with a few wealthy young men, and everyone jokingly teased him,

Young Master Sawyer, have you heard? This morning, your father-in-law took your fiancée to T University; your fiancée wants to get in there.

What a pity, Vice Principal Zhou directly closed T University's gates, didn't let your father-in-law, mother-in-law, or fiancée in; they were given the cold shoulder.

Later, your fiancée went to A University; I heard she's already in. A University is the worst medical school, but even so, it's a stretch for her to get in. I thought she would inherit the Sterling family's business and start wielding knives and guns.

James took off his racing helmet, what, that clown has gone to study at a medical school?

T University didn't even let her through the gate, and she got into the worst A University?

James felt his face was totally lost because of her; how she wants to embarrass herself is her business, but just because the two of them are engaged, he's also going to lose face.

The last time she humiliated him over the phone, he hasn't settled with her yet, now it's time to settle both old and new scores.

"Let's go. I'm going to A University right now and block that clown; I have to break off the engagement today, or else you all will be laughing at me for a hundred years!" James headed towards A University.

Everyone saw the drama and quickly got excited, they all followed, "Young Master Sawyer, wait for us, we'll go with you, we happen to want to see your fiancée's true face."

...

T University.

Anabelle Rathborne also heard about Serena Sterling, her classmates vividly described the event to her,

Annette, your cousin James Sawyer's fiancée has already entered A University. I heard this morning the head of the Sterling family and Mrs. Blue came to T University and caused quite a scene, scaring Vice Principal Zhou.

I also heard Young Master Sawyer has brought people and is rushing over to block Serena Sterling at the school entrance; this is going to be quite a show.

Annette, school is out, let's go over and take a look.

T University and A University are neighbors, they are very close, just a few steps away.

Anabelle wasn't very happy seeing the excitement around her; she didn't know how Serena had become a sensation, but anyway, her attention is extremely high now.

She used to be in the spotlight, but now everyone is going over to A University to see Serena Sterling, which made her a bit downcast; although everyone is going just to see a joke, she still wasn't happy.

What's more, what's there to see about Serena Sterling? She's totally not worth her wasting time.

Anabelle checked the time and quickly showed a sweet smile. She stood up and left, "Sorry, I don't have time; you all can go yourselves. Hayden is coming to pick me up, it's time now, I'm going to find Hayden."

"Annette, you're so lucky, you're like a little girlfriend in love." The others envied.

Anabelle felt a bit happier, this is her life, growing up amidst envy and praise, she waved her little hand and left.

...

A University, Traditional Medicine Class 2.

The school bell rang, and the classmates couldn't hold back any longer; they quickly surged towards Serena Sterling, surrounding her,

Serena, my mom brought chocolate back from Westerland, I'm giving it to you, let's be friends.

Serena, where is your home, I'll drive you back.

Serena, here's a note I wrote for you, you must read it.

Serena was surrounded by such enthusiasm, she could only smile politely, "Thank you for your affection, we are classmates, already friends, I can't accept the gifts you're giving me. I'm heading home now, see you tomorrow."

Serena carried her backpack and left the classroom.

Everyone stuffed their gifts into her desk drawer, filling it up, then chased after her, following behind Serena.

This had become a spectacle at A University, the most dazzling scene, everyone crowded around her, with her in the center, a massive procession.

Tiana Ford laughed, "Serena, you're not scared, right? Our A University hasn't had a beauty come for a long time, they always climb T University's walls to see school beauty Anabelle; now you're here, they're all looking at you. You're their new prized toy."

Serena curved her lips, indicating she understood.

At this time, many people took out their phones to take pictures, posting Serena's photo on A University's forum, titled: Warm Welcome to A University's New School Beauty!

At this moment, a luxurious Rolls-Royce Phantom slowly stopped at T University's gate; Hayden Crawford was here to pick up Anabelle after school.

He didn't get out of the car, but slowly slid down the driver's window to let the fresh air in, quietly waiting.

A commotion ahead caught his attention; it was a crowd at A University's gate during the peak student dismissal period.

His deep-set eyes glanced casually in that direction, then faintly looked away, but two seconds later, he placed his gaze back there.

Hayden saw Serena Sterling, who was surrounded in the middle of the crowd.

The girl's delicate figure instantly struck his gaze. She wore the school uniform, no different from those other female students around her, but there was just that difference.

With the same clothes, she had the best figure, her well-developed youthful body was like a willow in the breeze, the slender curves outlined to the extreme, her skin white as snow, that kind of milky white evoked a forbidden desire to destroy, a small and exquisite black backpack hanging from behind, supremely elegant and pristine.

Hayden's pupils contracted sharply, something inside him hurt. He stared at that delicate figure, and his eyes felt burning hot.

Very painful, very painful.

When Anabelle happily came running out, she saw this scene; Hayden was sitting elegantly in the driver's seat of the Rolls-Royce, holding the steering wheel with one hand, he was staring at a girl, focusing so intently he didn't even blink.

Anabelle had never seen him look at a girl like this.

He was always indifferent and aloof, even with her it was the same. Even when she kissed him, he never reacted, she had thought he was uninterested in girls.

But now, he was using an intense, fierce gaze to look at a girl.

Anabelle noticed the difference today too. Usually, when she finished school, T University's gate was crowded, especially those good-for-nothing rich kids from A University would come over to sneak a peek at her. Although she looked down on them, it had become a habit.

Today, those people didn't come.

Not one person came.

Anabelle raised her head to look at A University's gate, now it's packed with people, those who used to watch her were now surrounding another girl.

Anabelle looked towards Serena Sterling.

Just then, a flashy red sports car parked at A University's gate; James Sawyer arrived with a few young men, his tone arrogant, "Where's the Sterling family's clown? Get her out here quickly!"