Abandoned Super Cutie Adopted by Billionaire Clan

Chapter 58

"Dad, what are you talking about? Yvonne blinked her big eyes in confusion. Her voice sounded soft.

Kelvin fixed his eyes on her.

The teacher he was talking about was Professor Taylor Johnson, who worked for the Biomedical Research Institute of the National Academy of Sciences. He knew that Taylor could cultivate Yvonne.

Taylor was the first scholar in the country to suggest that volatiles in plants have an effect on human health.

When he was in college, he had used headspace solid-phase microextraction gas chromatography mass spectrometry coupled with a variety of plant volatiles to conduct research and testing, and his research found that many of the plant volatile species have a direct role in the health and recovery of the human body.

After his paper was published, it caused a stir in academia at the time.

Since then, many scholars and research labs have followed suit. There were also papers on plant chemistry and chronic diseases, the effects of plant smells on humans, the effects of plant extracts on thyroid cancer cells, etc. Various research papers on the role plants played on human health were published.

Later. Taylor entered the National Academy of Sciences and began to study how to increase the volatiles in plants that were beneficial to human health.

For more than forty years, every time his research results were released, it would cause a huge uproar.

After various research institutes compared and analyzed, it was confirmed that the improved plants developed by Taylor could increase human immunity and self-healing ability. After people stayed with the plants for a long time, it could reverse aging and extend lifespan.

Due to the fact that the increase in certain volatile substances in plants also had a positive effect on the plants themselves, the flowers used as experiments in the research labs were abnormally lush and the fragrance of the flowers was strong.

Yvonne's flowers were a bit different. Although the fragrance of the flowers grown by Yvonne was strong, it was acceptable.

Even those who didn't like the fragrance wouldn't get sick of it.

This was because along with the fragrance of the flowers, there was a mysterious energy that could make one feel refreshed.

The fragrance of the flowers in the research institutes was simply strong. Perhaps the fragrance was mixed with substances that could improve one's emotions, but because it was too weak and negligible, people who did not like flower fragrance would find it strong.

However, the last time the results were released was three years ago. Perhaps this problem had been improved by now.

Kelvin did not care about the progress of the current research.

He just wanted to use Taylor's reputation in this field to give Yvonne's achievement a scientific reason.

Most of the people in the country could not come into contact with Taylor's research results. Kelvin was not worried that others would discover Yvonne's ability.

Moreover, the majority would subconsciously deify the top talents in a field.

Kelvin was sure that with certain help, Yvonne would become a well–known genius.

Kelvin rubbed Yvonne's hair and did not tell her who that teacher was for the time being. "I'll take you to him as soon as I've discussed it with him"

Yvonne stared at Kelvin's face for a long time with her big eyes.

She puffed up her checks slowly with a serious expression on her adorable face. Her childish voice was filled with confusion when she said, "Daddy, you should tell me in detail.

Kelvin's fingers moved. He felt like poking her cheeks

"Alright now. Let's go down and eat. With that, he just stood up and walked out of the room.

Yvonne hurriedly followed him. She sounded a little anxious. "Hey! Daddy, you haven't said who my teacher is…"

When Yvonne woke up on Monday morning, Kelvin had already left. Lillian said that he went to Strate City.

After breakfast. Yvonne was sent to school.

She was not very happy today. When she arrived at school, she met Anna, who was equally unhappy.

The two girls huddled together and hugged each other.

"Yvonne…" Anna whimpered. She looked at Yvonne's face and sniffed. "I'm in a worse state. I'll talk first."

Yvonne nodded. "Okay."

Anna spoke first, and Yvonne leaned on the table and listened carefully.

Anna said. "Yesterday, I told you that my family's fish was sick. Then, my grandpa contacted someone who could save it, but I drove him away in anger.

"What?" Yvonne's eyes widened in shock. "How did you drive him away?"

Anna felt like crying with a hopeless face. "I said that his magical medicine is made of lavender ground into powder."

Yvonne was silent for a few seconds. The expression on her face kept changing, and she felt very conflicted and sad.

Anna laid on the table pitifully and sighed. She suddenly thought of something and asked, "Oh, right, Yvonne, have you found your flowers?"

Yvonne said. "No. They were sold."

Anna straightened up and exclaimed, "This is terrible. How did your dad deal with the thief?"

Yvonne replied, "She left our house."

Anna said, "That's how it should be. Otherwise, she'll steal more and sell them again"

Anna. "Here you

Speaking of this, Yvonne took out her thermos cup from her backpack and then handed her backpack to A go, Anna.

Anna took it curiously and opened it to see that it was filled with lavender.

The flowers were wrapped tightly in a plastic bag, and the fragrance could not be smelled.

She closed the backpack in surprise and did not let the other children around her see it.

"Yvonne, thank you so much!" Anna hugged Yvonne tightly and rubbed her face against hers.

You're welcome, Yvonne said in a childish and soft voice.

After school. Anna ran to the living room with two backpacks.

Standing at the door, she saw Grayson sitting beside the fish, and her cheerful footsteps subconsciously stopped.

She hesitated at the door for a while, not daring to enter.

Suddenly, Grayson saw her and extended his hand to her. "Anna, why aren't you coming in?"

Anna walked over slowly. She was carrying two schoolbags today. She was carrying hers in her hand, and the shoulder straps had fallen to the ground.

The other one was Yvonne's bear backpack. It was carried on Anna's shoulder. From afar, it looked like a bear was lying on her back.

Anna walked up to Grayson, lowered her head, and called him Grandpa with a guilty voice.

Grayson placed his hand on her head and asked, "Why do you have another backpack on you?"

Anna blinked and whispered, "It's Yvonne's.

Speaking of this, she took off the backpack and carefully placed it on the chair. Then, she unzipped it and took out the plastic bag inside. Grandpa, this is for you. Put it at the head of the bed, and you'll sleep more comfortably at night."

Anna handed the flowers to Grayson along with the plastic bag. Then, she zipped up the small backpack and carried it on her back with a loving expression.

Through the plastic bag, Grayson could see what was inside. There's so much lavender. Did you buy it?"

Anna shook her head. "No. It's from Yvonne."

"The little girl you're best friends with. Grayson clearly knew much about Yvonne. "She's growing new flowers now!

Anna said, "Yeah. She has a lot of flowers. She's even keeping fish now."

When Anna mentioned Yvonne, she always had many things to say.

At that moment, her brother, Fred, walked in.

"Anna was right yesterday. That priest's magical medicine was really made from lavender ground into powder." After Fred entered the living room and said that, he stood by the table and had some coffee.

Anna asked curiously, "How did you know, Fred?"

Fred said, "Coincidentally, when I was investigating his identity, I found out that he had a criminal record.

"A few days ago, he committed fraud under the bridge and used some homemade pills that he claimed to have health effects to cheat many old people of their money. I brought some guys to catch him.

"After that, we took the magical medicine he fed the fish to the hospital for analysis and found that the ratio of lavender in it was 80%. The remaining 20% was powder from other flowers."

Fred smiled and rubbed Anna's hair. "Not bad, Anna. Your nose is sharp enough to smell the ingredients immediately."

Grayson looked at the fish tank and frowned. "Do you still have the medicine?"

"The last pill happened to be sent to the hospital for analysis, Fred said.

Then, afraid that Grayson would feel upset, Fred quickly added, "But Grandpa, that man said that Lavender was bought by a nary. If we find that nanny, we should be able to get the raw materials."

Grayson sighed deeply. He knew that he could not rush it, but he could not

He tightened his grip on the plastic bag in his hand. When he saw Anna's guilty expression from the corner of his his expression softened slightly. He knew that she was meticulous, so she did not say what he had on his mind in front of her.

He instructed, "Anna, bring the vase over. We'll put the flowers in it."

Fred went to do it instead.

In less than half a minute, he came down with a beautiful vase in his hand. "Grandpa, where did you get the lavender? Its package is quite shabby"

Anna kicked his calf unhappily and said fiercely. "You can't say that!"

A smile appeared on Grayson's face. "It was given by Anna's friend. Yvonne, who is very good at growing flowers."

As soon as he finished speaking, he had just untied the knot of the plastic bag straps. When he smelled the strong scent of lavender, he froze on the spot.

"Why… Why is the fragrance of this flower so strong… Fred directly reached out and pinched a bit of the lavender before putting it to the tip of his nose.

The moment the bag was opened, the fragrance that had been sealed for the entire day quickly filled the entire room.

Outside the living room, a big black shadow ran toward them. It was Teddy.

It stood under the table, its tail wagging like a propeller.

Fred could actually see satisfaction and desire on its face.

An idea suddenly appeared in his mind. I remember now. It's that girl!"

He realized that Yvonne was the girl who came to his house last week with a bouquet of flowers.

That day, her flowers were all eaten by Teddy. She was so scared that she cried. In the end, she brought two small fish home.

Grayson still did not know about this, so he asked Fred to tell him.

At that moment, the big fish tank on the table suddenly moved.

Anna was so startled that she pointed at the fish tank and shouted, "Grandpa, the fish is moving!"

Grayson quickly turned around and saw the rumbling surface of the water at the top of the fish tank.

The huge fish actually floated out of the water, just like how it had jumped out of the tank a few years ago when it saved Grayson

However, it was sick and had no strength. It tried many times but could not jump out of the fish tank.
