

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 327

From Pippa's expression, Aubree could tell that her son had really gone.

In disappointment, she muttered, "Ivan has changed. He has become a different man after losing his memories. He only cares about Jennifer Brooks."

For her, it was an ominous sign.

She knew Jennifer wasn't simple and had her ambitions, so she believed that Jennifer would ruin her son.

No one knew her aim, but Aubree believed it must be the Marsh Group.

She checked Jennifer but didn't find anything useful, so she felt uneasy as well.

After adjusting her mood, Catherine pushed the door and entered the emergency room.

Ivan left the hospital without looking back, completely ignoring her. The heartache almost stopped her from breathing.

"Mom..." Catherine tried to keep calm and greeted Aubree. "Feeling better?"

"Don't worry, Catherine," Aubree consoled her, "The wedding three days later will be held as planned. Adjust yourself. Wait to be the bride."

Catherine wasn't expectant at all, although it would be the day she had dreamed about for years.

The scene where Ivan asked Jennifer to marry him in kindergarten appeared in her mind. Catherine felt too ashamed to return to the Marsh Group, afraid the employees would mock her.

She also dared not to check the netizens' comments about the videos.

"Catherine, keep the faith." Aubree was worried about her. "We must do it for Ivan's good. Jennifer Brooks is not a simple woman. She stays by Ivan's side. Who knows what she aims for?"

Pippa was shocked by her words, wondering if the situation was indeed that complicated.

"Her background is too clean," Aubree added, "Andrew failed to find anything after checking her for three months. It's quite abnormal. She's probably a special agent."

Catherine was mentally struggling. Her love for Ivan had worn her out. So many things had happened, and she was exhausted.

Especially today, Ivan asked Jennifer to marry him in kindergarten before many students' parents.

When Ivan's Lamborghini left the hospital, dark clouds gathered in the sky. Soon, it started drizzling.

Ivan headed for the seaside villa, thinking about Jennifer all the way.

Gripping the steering wheel, he frowned, looking aloof and noble.

His mother had an attending doctor. If she didn't value her own life, he couldn't do anything.

He had lost Jennifer once, so he was unwilling to lose her again.

Although he couldn't remember their past, he knew how unique Jennifer was to him.

He feared that she would leave Arkpool City.

The scene where Spencer left with Jennifer kept haunting him, giving him an intense migraine.

Ivan stepped on the gas to accelerate the car.

In the seaside villa.

Jennifer squatted in front of a sofa with an opened first-aid kit next to her.

Right then, she was a professional doctor dealing with her patient's wounds.

Spencer was sitting on the sofa, his mouth corner bleeding, his right cheek swollen with a bruise.

Watching Jennifer skillfully and gently put the ointment on his wound, he didn't see any expression on her face, so he guessed that she was absentminded.

"If Ivan refuses to marry Catherine, I won't take the medicine. Nothing can change my mind. You promised me to leave."

"I have heart disease. Although I don't need to be rescued, it'll worsen as long as I don't take medicine. If you are sensible enough, you know what to do."

"I won't let your wishes come true, Jennifer Brooks."

Jennifer felt exhausted when recalling Aubree's warnings.

Spencer rested his elbows on his knees, leaning forward to stare at her, wishing to see through her mind.

"What's eating you?" he asked gently.

However, Jennifer seemed not to hear his voice. She still put the ointment for him absentmindedly.

Spencer could tell that the hope of his chance would be gone soon.

She was thinking about Ivan, which he was pretty sure.

"Guess, Jennifer." Spencer seized her hands. "Guess if they'll get married."

Jennifer was shocked, raising her head. She noticed the playful smile on his lips.