

The Deadly 107

Chapter 107 A Smile Meant Solely for Robin

Shirley admired the imposing figure of Robin, and in that moment, all her earlier frustrations faded way

Her gaze was filled with a tranquil elegance that radiate from him, a sense of calm that rendered any disasters or conflicts inconsequential in his presence, Ever since that snowy New Year's Eve, her existence had be intertwined with his.

Even her long-buried youthful feelings had resurfaced alongside this bond.

What was unfolding around her seemed trivial; she willingly stood by Robin through everyth Since his arrival in her life, the once-dreary world had transformed into a vivid spectacle.

She frequently found herself excitedly anticipating Robin's unconventional approach to challenges

His actions embodied a refreshing freedom-unfettered, unreserved, and utterly exhrating This exhrating feeling was something she had never encountered in her 20 years of life. Turning to Robin, Shirley smiled softly, her expression reflecting warmth and agreement.

"It's alright; whatever path you choose, I'm here for you. The Dunns can handle this!"

Her smile, gentle as flowing water, was captivating and mesmerizing!

*All the attendees at the venue were struck by the brilliance of Shirley's smile.

Time appeared to stand still in that enchanting moment!

She was Harmonfield's most stunning woman, the goddess who caught the admiration of many men from afar.

And now, she was smiling at Robin?

Her smile bloomed like a flower, radiating kindness and warmth.

Many men were left spellbound by the sight.

Women felt dwarfed and envious, jealous of the allure she exuded.

Could a smile truly be so breathtaking it stirred the soul?

This was the first time Shirley had ever unveiled such a captivating smile in public.

And it was a smile meant solely for Robin.

All eyes at the signing ceremony turned toward Robin,

Who exactly is this man?

He's just a bodyguard associated with the esteemed Dunns.

Alice had severed her engagement with Rokiel

They wondered if this was now using this to undermine the Millers in the Eastvale Ecological Project

No one anticipated such a dramatic turn of events at today's signing ceremony

Vera quickly pulled Alice aside, whispering, "Alice, can not embarrass yourself? Don't you knear what kind of event this is? Why are you saying all thist "Do you realize what you're doing! You're pushing the Dunne too far

"Vera, don't lecture met Alice brushed her off, continuing. I can't stand men like him Lacking any real skill, they resort to petty gossip! Disgusting!" Vera sighed, resigned to the situation.

There was no way to redirect someone who had lost their sense of reason.

You had a winning hand.

But you've ruined it yourself!

"Robin, do you dare to explain to the media why you turned down the Millers?"

"Yeah! Robin, you need to give us a satisfactory explanation. If not, we'll expose the scandal regarding you and the Dunn Group to the press!" Grace shouted angrily.

Everyone in the signing hall turned their attention to Robin

The drama of the day was being increasingly captivating.

Howard, the instigator, silently ridiculed Robin. Haha! Robin, if you can't provide a decent explanation for the removal of the names from the collaboration list today, you might be in serious trouble! He secretly sneered at Shirley,

Her stunningly icy expression betrayed no feelings as she silently observed Alice standing at the front of the stage, her gaze betraying a trace of scorn.

Having grown up amidst the elite circles of society, often in her grandfather's company, she had seen it all.

The unfolding scene needed any intimidation for her.

With an air of indifference, Robin turned his attention toward Alice, a smirk ying on his lips, "Fine, Ms. Jennings, let's let the reporters waiting in the lobby in."

Amber paused briefly, ncing at Shirley for confirmation.

"Follow Mr. Ramsey's orders," Shirley replied tly.

At that moment, she had already set her emergency ns into motion.

Should Robin find himself overwhelmed by the reporters, she would call upon the Dunns' top-notch PR Department to manage the crisis.

Their intervention would effectively annihte the Miller Group, Haven Realty, and Gill Group.

This would act as a stark warning to any troublemakers in Harmonfield.

If they dared to step out of line, these threepanies would serve as ring examples!

After Amber reached out to the security team, a wave of reporters surged into the signing hall.

They had already been alerted to the unfolding events outside; today's story was a sensational reveal!

It centered around the enigma of Shirley and her bodyguard, Robin, the revelation that Shirley's bodyguard was the man Alice had rejected, and the fact that Robin, in his role as a bodyguard, was meddling in the Dunn Group's central management decisions. The reporters had their stories ready to go.

As they rushed into the room, a female journalist from Harmonfield's television network was the first to speak up.

"Mr. Ramsey, as a bodyguard, what gives you the authority to interfere in the Dunn Group's management decisions? Is it because one of the signatories here today is from the Millers, who turned down your engagement?"

Robin simply shrugged. "I'm busy and won't be addressing each of your questions one by one. After you've all asked your questions, I'll answer."

"Mr. Ramsey, are you dodging the issue? Or are you too scared to face what I'm asking?" the reporter pressed him.

Robin shot her a frosty look. "Did you notprehend what I just said?"

"If you can't even grasp that, you can leave. I'm not interested in talking to someone who doesn't understand anything. "Next! Who else has a question?"

"What's with your attitude?" The reporter's annoyance was evident.

Typically, as a representative of Harmonfield television, she enjoyed high regard wherever she went.

It was uneptable for this man to humiliate her in front of all the other reporters!

"Just a moment! I'm a reporter from Harmonfield'swork center, and you have to answer my questions!"

Robin made a dismissive gesture. "In my presence, there's nothing that's required. Next!"

The reporter was relentless. "Wait! Aren't you concerned about what I might report based on your responses?"

"You can be quiet now!" Robin snapped, his patience wearing thin.

Silence fell over the room.

No one had anticipated that Robin would so openly disregard this reporter.

Alice watched his reckless antics, her gaze filled with disdain.

"Robin, you're just sidestepping the questions from the reporters, aren't you? I bet all the mandatory inquiries."

Grace added, "Exactly! You'd better explain why we are getting the project today, or we'll expose your secrets right here in front of everyone from Harmonized"
