

The Deadly 19

Chapter 19 I'm Beating You

Noticing Rygar's hesitation, Shirley couldn't decipher his thoughts.

Was he perhaps considering the influence of the Dunns

His mind was a mystery to her.

Still, she made onest attempt, "Mr. Rygar, I urge you to handle this matter with caution!"

At that moment, Rygar was staring at Robin in shock, seemingly oblivious to Shirley's words.

On the other hand, Robin met Rygar's gaze with a faint smile, patiently waiting for his next move.

Behind Rygar, over a hundred assassins gripped their short knives, ready to pounce on Robin at a moment's notice.

A one-sided massacre seemed imminent.

But Rygar remained frozen.

His eyes were locked on the short dragon dagger at Robin's waist.

A golden light momentarily shed on the uniquely colored scabbard of the dragon dagger.

Though fleeting, it was enough to shock Rygar.

Rygar clearly recognized it as the legendary Golden Dragon Emblem!

A wave of dizziness washed over Rygar.

A week ago, assassins from the shadowy world of the dark web had suddenly appeared at his Abyssal Dominion, sending shockwaves through him.

It was said that once targeted by this mysterious organization, death was inevitable.

Rygar knew that while the Abyssal Dominion ruled Harmonfield's underworld, it was insignificant compared to the global reach of the dark web.

The four dark web assassins had warned him that the Heir of the Gilded Dragon, the most esteemed guest of the Dark Queen, had arrived in Harmonfield. They could call upon his Abyssal Dominion for assistance if needed.

Now, seeing the dragon dagger and the faint Golden Dragon Emblem, Rygar realized the man before him was the revered Heir of the Gilded Dragon! Even the ruthless Queen of the Night treated this young master with the utmost respect.

How could Rygar, a mere underworld figure, dare to provoke him?

Taking another step forward would be like leaping into an abyss!

Thankfully, he hadn't acted rashly.

He had almost made a grave mistake.

The realization of his near-fatal error sent a wave of fear through Rygar, his body drenched in cold wea

A sense of impending doom washed over him.

How could his Abyssal Dominion possibly challenge the Queen of the Night, a dominant figure in the Dark Wis, whemanded armies and toppled nations? Opposing such power would be suicidal!

The man before him, the Heir of the Gilded Dragon, was someone Rygar absolutely couldn't afford to antagonize.

Frustration boiled over, and Rygar cursed, ripping off his trench coat.

His eyes burned with murderous intent. The hundred assassins behind him instantly raised their knives poised to strike.

"Mr. Rygar's lost it! It seems even the Dunns can't escape his wrath."

"It's been years since we've seen Mr. Rygar this angry in public. Robin's doomed, and the Dunns might be dragged down with him!"

"Mr. Rygar's fury is terrifying. We better stay clear or risk getting caught in the crossfire."

From afar, Alice had been eagerly awaiting Rygar's move.

She sneered, "This brute brought this on himself by provoking Rygar. Just because he knows some arts, does he think he invincible?"

"What an idiot! Robin, even if you wanted to impress me with your skills, you didn't have to lose your head over it.

"Do you really think you can take on Abyssal Dominion alone?

*Do you

"How ridiculous! Do you really believe the Dunns can protect you? Ha..."

Zachary was delighted by Robin's impending downfall

He hooked his arm around Alice and said, "This guy is digging his own grave. He's a frog in a well

"He just arrived in Harmonfield and already thinks he's something special. Now he's crossed Rygar, and today he's going to leave here in a coffin."

Alice laughed mockingly and stopped talking, watching the situation unfold further.

At this moment, Shawn was already preparing to celebrate.

He looked smugly at Robin and Shirley. "Ms. Dunn, tell that brat to kneel and beg for mercy. "Maybe Mr. Rygar will give you the Dunns some respect and leave his corpse intact, hahaha "Kid, a worthless ant like you dares to mess with Abyssal Dominion? You're asking for death! Now that Mr. Rygar is here, show me that arrogance again!"

Suddenly, a scream pierced the air.

Rygar had pressed his lit cigar against Shawn's eye.

Then, with a powerful kick, he shattered Shawn's leg

A cracking sound echoed as a bone broke!

Shawn crumpled to the ground, writhing in agony, screaming in pain.

"Mr. Rygar, why... why are you

Still not satisfied, Rygar kicked Shawn hard in the face,

"D"mn it, I brought you up from nothing, and this is how you repay me?!

"Without Abyssal Dominion, what are you?!"

"I gave you power, and you use it to unt the name of Abyssal Dominion?"

"How dare you dare to disrespect someone of Ms. Dunn's stature?"

"Do you think just because I'm backing you, you can do whatever you want? Well, today Inf going to cripple you!"

Shawn was dazed by Rygar's beating

He knelt on the ground, begging for mercy, "Mr. Rygan, did you hit the wrong person?"

"I'm beating you, you idiot!"

Rygar cursed as he continued to nce at Robin out of the corner of his eye.

He hoped this would slightly appease the Heir of the Gilded Dragon's anger.

"You idiot, do you think I came here to back you up? Disrespect Ms. Dunn, huh? You deserve to die!"

Shawn finally realized that Rygar was seriously going to make an example of him!

"Mr. Rygar, I... I was wrong. I'll never use Abyssal Dominion's name to bully others again.

Please give me another chance, Mr. Rygar! Ms. Dunn, give me another chance! I'm not fit to be called human, I'm a beast! I should never have disrespected you. "Please forgive me this one time. I swear I'll never offend you again!"

Shawn crawled to Shirley's feet, bowing and begging for mercy.

Shirley was utterly baffled.

Rygar had never cared about the Dunns name when aging in Harmonfield.

This sudden and drastic change was nothing shons of agiraculous plot twist.

Shirleywall couldn't understand Rygar's actions.

Vera nced at the still disdainful Alice beside her.

She thought to herself, "Alice, you might have truly misjudged him. You've let a treasure slip through your fingers."

"If I get the chance, I won't hesitate to seize it."

Driven by this thought, Vera made a bold decision.

She was going to get closer to Robin.

Perhaps he would bring her an unexpected surprise.
