

The Deadly 73

Chapter 73 Seven-Step Divine Drakebanc

She quickly averted her gaze in embarrassment. "How can I express my gratitude?"

Robin chuckled softly. It was surprising to see Ms. Dunn, who usually maintained a poised and distant attitude, appear so bashful and flustered multiple times today. "Come on, there's no need to worry about such a small matter.

"Also, didn't you make me the CEO of the Eastvale Development Company?"

"That's enough; I get it! You can head back now."

As he began to walk away, Shirley stopped him and gave him two keys.

keaway,

"The Eastvale Development Company is can be inconvenient to commute there for work.

Situated in the eastern suburbs of Harmonfield, and it

"Here are the keys to a vi and a lovely apartment, which are close to the developmentpany.

"Both properties belong to the Dunn Group.

"The vi is a little farther away, but the interior is nicer. If you find yourself too busy at the Eastvale Development Company, I... I sometimes stay there as well.

At this moment, Shirley"s cheeks flushed. "Um, I don"t stay there often.

"The apartment is directly across from the Eastvale Development Company. It"s an average living space- not veryrge, just a two-bedroom unit of about 1,000 square feet. "However, the nearby amenities are quite good.

"Pick whichever ce you prefer to stay! Living in either of these two properties will make it easier for you to reach thepany."

Shirley paused and asked, "Oh, I forgot to check-where are you currently staying? Is it a hotel?"

"Huh? I"m staying near Dawnsfire Mountain," Robin answered nonchntly,

Shirley didn"t pry any further. "Oh, that"s pretty far from the Eastvale Development Company. You should stay in one of these two houses."

After a brief moment of thought, Robin epted the keys. "That sounds good. I'll see you at the developmentpany tomorrow morning!"

As she watched Robin's silhouette fade away into the distance, Shirley felt a sense of reluctance to say goodbye.

She lingered in front of the vi for a while, only turning around once he had vanished into the darkness. After leaving the Dunns, Robin didn't get into Rowan's car right away. The inside of the Dunns' vi was sweltering, so hot that he felt as though he couldn't breathe.

Thus, he decided to stroll along the tree-lined paths of Mount Geneva under the night sky. 8×76%

The air in the snow-covered mountains following the recent snowfall was incredibly refreshing.

The chilly mountain breeze brushed against his flushed face, providing a sense of relief.

Especially in the stillness of thete night, walking along this mountain road offered him a break from the chaos of the world.

Rowan didn't interrupt him either.

He drove the Land Rover with the headlights off, keeping a distance of around 600 feet behind.

As Robin made his way up the mountain, a figure suddenly emerged in front of him, blocking his path.

At the same distance, Rowan also noticed the warrior standing before Robin!

His instincts told him that this individual was a skilled master!

By simply picking up on the other person's aura, he could tell that their level of cultivation was much higher than that of the Brookhaven Butcher! However, Robin didn't n on seeking his assistance, so Rowan had no choice but to remain silently in the car and observe what happened next. Sensing the intense killing intent radiating from the other person, Robin raised an eyebrow. "Are you certain you want to stand in my way?"

The stranger stayed quiet, his sharp gaze sizing Robin up as though trying to pierce through him.

After several seconds, he smirked. "So, you're the one who disabled the Brookhaven B