

The First Heir 1761

Chapter 1761

"50 billion?"

Homer was startled before his expression turned cold and he said solemnly, "Young man, are you kidding me?"

50 billion dollars was a sky-high amount even in Charbury!

Even as the richest family in Charbury, the Dunley family would be tempted by such an astronomical figure.

Homer's face was very gloomy as he added, "I'm discussing a solution with you. Don't you think it's a bit too disrespectful of you to talk to me like this? Also, do you even have 50 billion dollars? To tell you the truth, five million is my limit not a single cent over this number. If you want to make a move on my son, I'm afraid it's difficult to do so."

At this point, Homer was very angry. The other party was clearly trying to scare him and taunt him by naming out 50 billion.

Homer was already being very generous by offering five million dollars, but the other party did not know what was good for him!

He knew that his strength alone was not enough to bring Hector Dunley back. However, he dared not resist Philip's order or make any excuses to reject him.

After thinking about it, Victor made a suggestion. "Young Master Clarke, based on the current situation, it'll be difficult for me to intervene in the affairs in Charbury. The foundation of the Dunley family in Charbury is too solid and I may not be able to bring Hector back in a short time."

Philip nodded and said, "You can just assist me in this matter. I have my own arrangements."

After that, he dialed George's number and said, "I want to overthrow Homer Dunley's lineage in Charbury."

Philip still had his limits. Since this was a problem that involved only Homer Dunley and his son, it was enough to punish their family without involving other innocent people.

At this moment, Homer was in the living room, sitting on a luxurious leather sofa while sipping on warm tea. Next to him, his son Hector was venting angrily, saying, "Dad, that damned Philip Clarke even tried to stop me in Uppercreek. Hehe, I must get him back for this!"

Homer glanced at his son and said unhappily, "That's enough! Do you have any idea how much trouble you've caused? He has already contacted me just now!"

Hector was taken aback before saying in an unperturbed manner, "He contacted you? Did he ask to settle it privately or something? I just injured a female nanny. It was just one knock and she passed out. It's her fault for not being physically fit enough to resist a beating. Besides, there's nothing remarkable about Philip. He just knows a guy by the name of Heath, who happens to be a subordinate of Victor Bell in Uppercreek. Even if Victor personally came to Charbury, there's no thing to fear! This is the territory of the Dunley family!"

Homer glared at his son coldly. He had pampered him too much, which caused him to have his defiant character today.

"Homer Pharmaceutical, return my hard earned money! You bunch of cheaters!"

"Homer Pharmaceutical has victimized old helpless people like us. They say we can live up to 99 years old if we use their health care products. But now, several of my friends have been hospitalized after taking their products!"

"The chairman of Homer Pharmaceutical, Homer Dunley, once promised us that we can get dividends if we buy their health care products like buying shares. Now that we're here for the dividends, they're giving us all kinds of reasons and excuses. They even got hooligans from the streets to drive us away. Sometimes, those people even lay a hand on old men and women like us!"

Hundreds of elderly people appeared on the camera. They were standing in the cold wind, frantically condemning Homer Pharmaceutical.

The instant he heard this name, Homer was stunned!

Philip Clarke?

How could it be?

That man only had some influence in Uppercreek. How could it reach Charbury?

Moreover, Homer Pharmaceutical was one of the top companies here with many supporters behind it. By doing this, it was tantamount to challenging Homer's patience and prestige, as well as challenging the company's backers!

"Neal, don't you f*cking bullsh*t me right now! How could Philip's hand reach Charbury?" Homer's face grew colder with deep resentment in his gaze.

Dunley, I'm afraid you don't understand. Your four units of dividends are nothing compared to the benefits they promised me. Besides, it's also difficult to determine how long Mr. Clarke's hands can reach. I can only give you a word of advice, don't be too pretentious and look down on others. This "Damn it! How dare Neal Pearce pull another trick on me at this point?! Once I regain my foothold, I'll make sure his life is worse than death!" Homer cursed.

On the side, Hector could not help but say at this moment, "Dad, that Neal Pearce is nothing but a cunning fox. I never had a good impression of him before. But he has so much evidence against us in his hands, what should we do? Why don't we expose him first? That way, that old fogey won't have the chance to deal with us."

Homer pondered before saying, "Nonsense! What a lousy idea! Even though he's done this to us, we can't retaliate this way! You have to remember that Neal Pearce is not the only one who has a partnership with our family. If we expose him at this time, what will our other partners think?"

Homer was still rational and knew that this absolutely must not happen.

Otherwise, not only would he lose Homer Pharmaceutical but he and his son would also be ruined!

"Then what should we do now? If this and that won't work, are we just going to watch our company collapse?" Hector was anxious.

Hearing this, Neal immediately said with indignation, "Mr. Dunley, as you know, we're talking about 30 million dollars right now. If you want me to take the money without doing anything, won't that be wrong of me?"

Milo sneered and said, "You can still do what you need to do, but I'm just saying that you can delay the timing a little. You can broadcast the incident about Homer Pharmaceutical three days later. Now, tell those reporters of yours to withdraw. It's not like the party behind you wants you to bring down Homer Pharmaceutical tonight, right?"

Neal was taken aback, and his eyes darted about. What Milo said made sense.

It was certainly possible. If he did things this way, he would not offend the Dunleys nor Philip. This was the best of both worlds.

After thinking about it, Neal's heart began to waver.

When he was hesitating, Milo spoke again, "Neal, since you're in Flower City, you should understand what kind of place Charbury is. Here, the Dunley family is king. If you help outsiders to mess with my Dunley family, you should know what the consequences are! So, I advise you not to go too far. Otherwise, even if you escape to the end of the world, the Dunley family will not let you off!"

Seeing the frown on his father's face, Hector smiled and said, "Dad, what are you thinking about? Stop worrying. Hasn't the matter been resolved for now? We have three days. Besides, with Seventh Uncle around, who dares to do anything to our family?"

"Fool! Don't you understand by now?" Homer glared at Hector angrily and shouted, "30 million dollars! Can you take out 30 million dollars to squander just like that? Moreover, the other party bought off Neal Pearce in just a few minutes. What kind of strength and means does it take to act so quickly within the boundaries of Flower City in Charbury?"

Hearing this, Hector was also taken aback.

Yes, it was 30 million dollars. If he spent all that money just like that, he would be heartbroken.

Moreover, the other party directly bought Neal off within ten minutes after talking to his father. It could be seen that his strength was not to be underestimated.

Hector shook his head and said, "I didn't find out anything. The four enforcers of the Nonagon this time are different from those before. They're keeping information on the direct access spot under a tight lid. Many families ran around asking about it but no one got any definite news. However, I have a friend who heard from the grapevine that the direct access spot this time has already been taken."

Hearing this, Homer asked in surprise, "It's been taken? Have you found out who it is? What price did the other party pay?"

Hector still shook his head and said, "Since this is a rumor, how can I find out? As for the price, it hasn't been revealed yet but it's at least ten billion dollars."

"Ten billion?" Homer's face darkened as he exclaimed.

"Ten billion was not a small amount!"

Even Homer Pharmaceutical was only worth over a billion dollars.

If he put together all his family assets, it would only total to about two or three billion dollars. It was far from enough. It seemed that the talent selection of the Nonagon was a lost cause this time around.

Homer looked disappointed and helpless as he shook his head. He said, "Forget it. It seems that we stand no chance to enter the Nonagon."
