

The First Heir 2561

Chapter 2561

At this moment, Wynn and Shane appeared together, looking dazzling and noble under the spotlight. It was the first time that Philip saw such a noble and elegant side of Wynn. No, to be precise, Wynn in the past was very approachable. Even if she attended business events and dressed for the occasion, she would not look like this. That was because the current Wynn appeared to carry an unfamiliar sense of distance.

Philip stood up abruptly, which startled Fennel and Steven beside him.

Fennel took it in stride. He recognized Wynn, so when he saw Wynn and Shane walking out together, a chill flashed at the corner of his eyes. He asked, "Why is Wynn here?"

Philip shook his head in bafflement, but it seemed that Wynn was here to attend this party.

Steven smiled, got up, and said, "Mr. Clarke, this is the important person I said you may want to meet. According to my information, she's your wife."

Steven did not yet understand the implications and only thought that Philip would be happy to meet his wife.

After all, being in a foreign land, he should be happy to see the woman he always thought of.

Of course, Philip was happy. The shock on his face was instantly replaced by tenderness as he looked at Wynn under the spotlight surrounded by everyone. She looked like a regal angel.

Meanwhile, on stage, Cleo invited Wynn and Shane to stand in front. She smiled at everyone and said, "Everyone, I'd like to formally introduce someone to you tonight. She's the long-lost bloodline of my Lovelace family and will also become a core member of our family in the future."

Cleo applauded and invited Wynn to step forward.

Wynn bowed to everyone humbly and said, "It's a great pleasure to meet all of you. My name is Wynn Johnston."

A round of applause rang. Everyone was impressed by Wynn's angelic poise and appearance. Discussions erupted below the stage.

Philip stood in the corner, hoping that Wynn would see him. However, Wynn did not seem to look in that direction and kept chatting with the noble guests. Seeing that Wynn was about to leave the platform with Cleo and Shane, Philip could not wait any longer. He walked quickly through the crowd. As he got closer, he heard Wynn's laughter.

Philip grabbed Wynn's delicate arm as she was turning to leave and said with a gentle smile, "Wynn..."

Many dignitaries of the West were taken aback at this scene.

Wynn glanced coldly at Philip who was pinned to the ground, and a trace of doubt flashed in her eyes.
This man was very strange. For a brief moment just now, her heart actually ached.

What was wrong with her?

She did not know the man in front of her at all, so why would her heart suddenly ache when she saw him being pinned to the ground?

Shane smiled and said, "Okay."

Then, he stared coldly at Philip, who was pinned to the ground. He said with a sneer, "Guards, throw him out."

With that command, the bodyguards dragged Philip up and out through the back door. Philip stared at Wynn who turned to leave. He could not believe that Wynn could not recognize him even though he was right in front of her.

Philip turned his head, looked at Steven, and took the document from Steven's hand. He looked through it carefully before the veins on his forehead throbbed. He roared. "Damn the Lovelace family!"

Seeing Philip's state, Fennel and Steven rushed over to take a look. When they saw the contents, they were stunned as well. It turned out that the reason why Wynn did not recognize Philip was that the Lovelace family had tampered with her memory. They actually used the most advanced technology to rewrite Wynn's memory. Now, Wynn was just a puppet for the Lovelace family to make a comeback.

Hiss!

The air fell into dead silence.

Fennel said furiously, "What the hell is the Lovelace family trying to do? How dare they do something like this? I'll arrange for manpower at once. Even if we have to grab her by force, we'll get Wynn out tonight!"

that said, Fennel was about to call the Strategist. However, Philip

Fennel said solemnly, "Based on the current situation, the Lovelace family has dealings with several major sacred halls. I don't think these sacred halls will let you make a move against them so easily. Moreover, this is an extraordinary period. Shane Lovelace is competing for the position of the new god. Once he succeeds, these sacred halls will gain even more benefits. So, in my opinion, they should step in and stop it. After all, this place is different from our country. Human relations are not important, only profits. Furthermore, although your Clarke family controls a huge chunk of the economy, the rest is in the hands of the West. Here, they're the only kings, while the Clarke family's power can hardly penetrate."

After hearing Fennel out, Philip fell silent. He understood Fennel's meaning. It would be difficult to make a move against the Lovelace family in the West. It was tantamount to threatening the interests of several sacred halls. To oppose the Lovelace family was to declare war against these sacred halls, and the consequences were self-evident!

Moreover, if that really happened and the rest of the sacred halls were also offended, it would not benefit Philip.

"Steven, what do you think?" Philip asked.

Steven thought for a moment and said, "Mr. Clarke, based on my judgment and personal opinion, what happened tonight was probably deliberately arranged by the Lovelace family. You should still remember what Miss Cleo said to us when she came over. I suspect they were trying to provoke you on purpose and agitate you into acting impulsively. As you said, if we had chosen to fight them head-on just now, we might have had a tough battle waiting for us. Moreover, Miss Johnston is still in their hands. If the situation worsens, her safety can't be guaranteed."

Philip nodded. Steven was right.

The incident tonight was probably planned by Cleo to trigger Philip. However, no matter what, he had to meet with Wynn alone.

Pete fell to the ground and was enraged by Philip’s kick.

He roared angrily, “Damn Easterner, you deserve to die! How dare you kick me?! Don’t let me catch hold of you, or I’ll crush you into pieces!”

Philip’s expression turned cold. He reached out and pulled a silver Desert Eagle from Han’s waist.

Bang!

A gunshot!

The bullet pierced Pete’s upper right leg, and blood gushed.

“Spit it out! Otherwise, the next bullet will be in your head!”

Philip said coldly. The Desert Eagle in his hand was already aimed between Pete’s eyebrows.

Pete cursed to hell and back, but in desperation, he could only agree to Philip’s request.

Half an hour later, under physical and mental torture, Pete finally drew out the internal structure of the four bases of the Lovelace family, complete with the facilities and arrangements for defense.

Philip looked at these drawings. A cloud of gloom flashed across his face. He tossed them to Fennel and said, “You make the arrangements.”

Fennel naturally understood what Philip meant. He took the blueprints and said to Hans, “Contact the Strategist immediately and make arrangements to take down these four bases!”

“Yes, Boss!”

Hans was excited. He finally had work to do!

Here, Philip stared at Pete coldly, tossed him a phone, and said, “Contact the other party.”

Pete was very aggrieved. He took the phone hesitantly, dialed a number, and said, “Dr. Garner, it’s me, Pete. There’s something urgent I need to discuss with you face-to-face right now.”

Then, he turned to Pete and asked, "Pete, what's going on? Aren't they your bodyguards?"

Pete laughed and said apologetically, "Dr. Garner, I'm sorry. I had no choice."

While Pete said this, Fennel and Philip had already stepped forward. Philip looked at Dr. Garner and said seriously, "Dr. Garner, I need your help to restore a person's memory. You may name the price."

Dr. Garner's face darkened with anger and chills as he refused. "Sorry, I don't do any deals! Please leave!"

With that said, Dr. Garner turned to leave. However, Philip said indifferently, "If you still want to see the sun tomorrow, you'd better agree."

The threat was spoken mildly with a hint of domineering.

Dr. Garner turned around and pushed his glasses. With chills in his eyes, he stared at Philip and Fennel, saying, "Damn Easterners! Do you think I'll listen to just the two of you? Ridiculous!"

The next second, the pistol in Philip's hand was aimed at Dr. Garner's chest. Philip said, "Dr. Garner, I hope you don't make the wrong choice."

"You madman! Restoring a person's memory isn't as easy as you think! We've been studying this research technology for five years but it just isn't ready yet!"

Dr. Garner roared. "Besides, even if you want to recover your friend's memory, you must first find their erased memory! Do you understand? You stupid fool!"

Dr. Garner shouted, his ears bleeding and his head buzzing.

Philip frowned and asked, "We need to find the memory first?"

Dr. Garner yelled, "Yes! And the erased memory is in the hands of Young Master Lovelace. The only way to recover that woman's memory is to get the memory that belongs to her from Young Master Lovelace!"

He said coldly, "Get out of the car and let us check!"

Philip and Fennel frowned.

At this moment, Dr. Garner poked his head out from the rear window and roared. "Damn it, are you blind? Don't you recognize me?"

When the guard saw Dr. Garner wrapped in bandages, he was startled before he bowed slightly and said, "Dr. Garner, why are you..."

Dr. Garner said grimly, "Don't worry about me. I have an emergency. Let us through!"

"Yes!"

The guard immediately raised his hand and signaled the people at the back to open the electronic gate. The black car drove into the institute, and they soon stopped at the entrance.

Philip and Fennel got out of the car and walked in front while Philip and Fennel followed closely. After passing through several doors that required fingerprint and iris verification, Philip and Fennel finally reached the core research room of the institute with
