Philip was also helpless. He turned to Anna and said with a wink, "Take care of Mila."

Then, he was dragged away from the Fenix Hotel by Melody.

The sunset scene in Phoenicia was really beautiful, enough for it to be featured in a nature documentary.

The sky was full of red sunset clouds. As it was autumn, the weather was cool and very suitable for going out shopping.

Phoenicia was also a famous cultural and historical town with small bridges and flowing water. The buildings were made from red bricks and the paths from green tiles. There were more than a dozen famous historical streets in this town alone.

The alleys were numerous and countless.

It was a typical ancient historical township.

Just when Philip and Melody left the Fenix Hotel, three suspicious-looking men in colorful shirts who were led by a tattooed man with a crew cut entered the building.

As soon as they entered the lobby, the tattooed man directly nodded to the male attendant at the front desk.

The male attendant nodded in immediate understanding and said into the intercom, "Turn off the monitors."

In less than a minute, Anna was pressed on the ground by the burly man. He was choking her in his hold!

Anna's eyes were bruised, and she was bleeding from her mouth and nose. Her face was flushed, and she was panting hard.

"Crusty, that's enough. Let's hurry up!"

The tattooed man walked in and glanced at the chaotic state of the room after the fight. There was a slight frown between his eyebrows.

After that, he walked toward the bed and flipped the sheets over.

Mila was hiding under the bed, trembling all over. Her black jewel-like eyes were staring at Anna who was being pressed on the ground. She cried and shouted, "Anna!"

Crying, she wanted to run toward Anna.

Anna was wounded all over and pressed to the ground. She turned to look at the running Mila while squeezing out a shout. "Run... Run!"

Mila felt sorry for Anna as she stretched out her little arms and ran over crying.

At this time, Philip was being dragged around the town by Melody.

At night, the scenery of Phoenicia was like a painting. The ancient streets were packed with tourists.

The roadside was filled with different stalls. There were vendors selling fruit, snacks, souvenirs, jewelry, and so on.

Melody skipped around happily like a 13-year-old girl.

"Hey, Philip, is this pretty?"

Melody picked up a masquerade mask, put it over her face, and asked Philip with a grin.

Philip put his hands in his trouser pockets, shook his head, and said, "It doesn't look good."

Melody rolled her eyes at him and said, "What a spoilsport."

Then, she seemed to have found something interesting and ran over joyfully like an elf.

It was a musical instrument made of bones.

It was a souvenir sold by an old woman.

"Young miss, would you like to buy one?"

The old woman narrowed her eyes and said with a grin.

Philip could not do anything but follow Melody into the Phoenix Pavilion.

However, not long after Philip and Melody entered, a convoy of four black Mercedes arrived at the entrance of Phoenix Pavilion.

The pompadour was grand.

The convoy stopped and the bodyguard opened the door of the Mercedes-Benz S series that was at the center.

The first thing that landed on the red carpet was a pair of slender and white feet stepping on crystal high heels.

Then came the white wide-leg silk trousers. The person had a tiny waist that could be held with one grip. She was wearing a low-cut white tunic sleeveless jacket with wide sunglasses and a red lace sunshade on her head.

Overwhelming!

An unparalleled beauty indeed!

The moment the woman got out of the car and took off her sunglasses, the crowd at the door was stunned by her beauty!

Philip calmly whispered a few words into Melody's ear. Immediately, Melody's gaze became extremely hostile.

This ugly man actually harbored evil intentions toward Wynn!

Melody could not take it lying down. She stepped forward, stood in front of Philip, and scolded Juan, "You're nothing but a toad who wants to get the princess! What a sleazebag!"

Juan frowned and looked upset as he scrutinized the woman before him.

She looked like she was in her early 20s with a pretty appearance and a fiery figure.

He really did not expect Philip to do this behind Wynn's back.

"Hehe."

Juan sneered and totally ignored Melody's verbal abuse toward him. Instead, he turned toward Philip and said coldly, "Philip, if I tell Wynn about your affair, what do you think will happen?"

Philip's face immediately turned dark.

Melody immediately retorted, "The f*ck are you talking about? Did you see me having an affair with Philip? Why is your mind so dirty? It's exactly like you, a fleabag!"

Juan was getting upset now. He was repeatedly humiliated by a young girl like her. Even a rabbit would bite when provoked.

"What did you say? I dare you to repeat that!"

Juan glared at Melody and growled.

In a luxurious private box on the third floor, Juan nursed his bruised nose and swollen face. He smashed the tea set angrily and cursed, "Damn you, Philip! I won't forget this!"

"Arrange two men and keep an eye on them. I want to know what they're up to!"

Through the mahogany window of the suite on the third floor, Juan looked down at the exhibition hall on the first floor below.

Phoenix Pavilion was a circular building structure, just like an ancient theater.

At the same time, in the largest most luxurious and extravagant suite on the third floor, a gorgeous woman stood next to the window while looking down at the movement on the first floor with her arms across her chest.

Her appearance was truly breathtaking.

Her bright eyes were locked on the two figures walking around the exhibition hall on the first floor.

No one knew who she was looking at or what she was thinking.

They just saw a smile slowly appearing on the corners of her mouth.

This smile made the entire Phoenix Pavilion feel as if it was bathed in a spring breeze.

He tried a couple more times, but it still went unanswered.

Philip was slightly worried.

“What’s the matter, Philip? Why are you in a daze?”

Melody suddenly sprang out from the side, looking very active and playful.

Philip squeezed the phone and said anxiously, "I can't get through Anna's phone."

Melody immediately took Philip's arm and said with a smile, "Oh, Anna will take good care of Mila, so don't worry. What can happen? I've seen Anna's skills. She's a black belt in Taekwondo, you know."

A black belt in Taekwondo?

Philip breathed a sigh of relief. Maybe Anna brought Mila out to play.

"Let's go. The auction is about to start. A lot of people came this time. It's so exciting!"

Melody was just a playful little girl, pushing Philip to the second floor.

The second floor of Phoenix Pavilion was the auction venue. It was a very stylish space that spanned across thousands of square feet.

At this moment, many people had already arrived at the auction venue, and there were also many people in the seats arranged in the main hall.

Melody rolled her eyes mischievously and said as she pushed Philip out, "I don't, but he does."

Philip was startled and even a little dumbfounded.

Suddenly, he felt hostile gazes on him.

They were mixed with suspicion, disdain, contempt, and sarcasm.

"Hehe, this guy? He just looks like an ordinary person, so stop teasing us. If he really has ten billion, why is he queuing up with us? He could just go through the green entrance over there."

The woman from before, with heavy makeup on her face, placed her arms over her chest while saying in a mocking tone. She then pointed to a group of distinguished guests who were being welcomed in by the service staff on the other side.

The meaning was quite obvious. If he had the money, why would he line up here?

Melody was upset and wanted to explain but was stopped by Philip.

Al fell in love with Melody at first sight and was very proud when he reported his self-worth.

Melody directly flung the business card to Philip, threw her arms around his neck lovingly, and said coquettishly, “He wants to invite me for dinner. Hubby, aren’t you going to say something?”

Philip had just been sitting there comfortably, but after turning his head, he met Melody’s winking eyes.

What was this lass up to now?

When Al saw this scene, he felt that someone had dug a knife into his chest. He suddenly exploded with anger!

Why?!

Why did beautiful women always go to ugly men?!

F*ck!

What the heck was wrong with this world?

If anyone knew Al’s inner thoughts at this moment, they would be surprised.

Al was upset. He actually got scared by the other party. As soon as he was about to scold him, two security guards approached them and asked, "What's going on here?"

Al immediately said, "This kid is causing trouble. You should kick him out!"

The two security guards glanced at Philip unkindly. They also saw Melody who was sitting quietly next to him while eating snacks. They said, "Sir, please sit down. The auction will begin soon."

After that, the security continued to say to Al, "Sir, please find a place to sit."

Al was so mad now. He wanted to say something but he held back in the end!

After all, he dared not cause a scene in Phoenix Pavilion's territory.

Mr. Phoenix was a ruthless person.

Once, someone bullied others and made trouble in Phoenix Pavilion. They disappeared from Phoenicia the next day.

A few days later, the body of that person was found floating in Phoenix Lake.

One after another, tourists filled up the outer hall. Philip did not want to cause more trouble, so he sat down and waited for the auction to begin.
