

The Growth 135

Chapter 135 - 14: Godslaying Skill: Bone Dance! (3/5)

On the road from White Bone City to City of Corpse.

"Huh?"

He Li suddenly lifted his head, seemingly electrified, after completing his usual mountain-clearing task.

"What is it?"

Using the sensory system built into his metallic armor, the Burrowing Insect immediately detected He Li's abnormality.

Not far from the two of them, a massive mountain was being dug open from the side.

A giant Worm type Bone Beast was being driven by a group of Skeletons, working hard to advance through the carved mountain, attempting to penetrate it completely.

This giant Worm type Bone Beast is not a single Bone Beast, but a "collective" made up of many Bone Beasts working together collaboratively.

The Bone Beasts at the front, constantly rotating, were responsible for digging, while the Skeletons at the back picked up the shattered pieces of the mountain.

A little further back, there were specialized Bone Beasts that secreted a white substance, used to lay on the surface of the road and mountain, then harden gradually into a white and sturdy bone-like structure.

Of course, just like mountain engineering in the real world.

After digging a certain distance forward, this massive engineering team would pause, letting other members of the Hundred Races inspect and survey the overall condition of the mountain.

Only after confirming that this route would not cause too much damage to the surrounding environment, would they further reinforce the already excavated tunnels.

Thanks to the presence of the Ascender He Li, the most difficult mountain blasting and excavation tasks turned out to be the easiest part of the entire engineering plan.

As a result, not only was the Burrowing Insect always watching He Li, but others in the engineering team quickly noticed He Li's abnormality.

"The City of Corpse... something has gone wrong!"

It was as if to verify He Li's words, a sudden violent tremor shook the ground.

Rumble...

Several unprepared Skeletons fell directly from the Worm type Bone Beast, breaking themselves apart.

The tunnels that had already been excavated began to shake due to this sudden earthquake, with various sizes of mountain fragments falling.

Thankfully, the planning master Burrowing Insect had already put safety measures in place, Avoiding large casualties.

Even so, such a large-scale sudden earthquake inevitably slowed down the engineering team's task progress.

"Peng Bo! Go check what's happening over at City of Corpse!"

In this situation, He Li immediately shouted loudly towards the sky.

In the next second, a massive four-winged serpent, MinAseerpentg She, flew out from the clouds, making a sharp turn towards the direction of City of Remains.

Whoosh!

Every flap of its wings stirred up a huge gust of wind.

The serpent Peng Bo habitually remained silent, but its actions were enough to reassure the other members of the engineering team.

Because Peng Bo was the strongest being in the team, other than He Li.

Even when confronting a true Ascender, Peng Bo's size and power allowed it to escape unscathed.

.....

As the undisputed Sky Dominator in the Mountain and Sea Realm, the speed of the serpent was undeniable.

It didn't take long for Peng Bo to fly over the City of Corpse.

Immediately, it witnessed a scene destined to be unforgettable.

At the edge of the storm and mist, in the southeast corner of City of Corpse.

A colossal blood and flesh monster, visible even from high altitude, was growing and destroying at a speed visible to the naked eye.

Its size was so massive it almost took up one-fifth of the entire city.

Its destructive power was terrifying; each swing of its tentacles swept many Skeletons into its body.

Even with the Second Generation Skeletons involved, the blood and flesh monster's growth was barely hindered for long.

It was continuously growing, continuously expanding...

Whenever a Second Generation Skeleton cut off one of its tentacles, it grew more to strike back.

Most frighteningly, when Peng Bo saw the blood and flesh monster, an indescribable fear surged through him.

As if it was the natural enemy of all creatures made of flesh.

The oppressive feeling from its ecological role on the food chain made even flapping his wings difficult for Peng Bo, let alone actively engaging in battle.

Only the Skeletons, devoid of flesh and blood, were able to resist and even encircle the blood and flesh monster.

However, that was all they could do.

Swoosh—Boom!

Watching the blood and flesh monster gradually break through the encirclement.

As it began to slaughter more Skeletons, a black-robed figure, A Ke, finally appeared in the center of the battlefield.

With his high-speed mobility attributes, A Ke's sprint broke the sound barrier, drawing several tentacles aimed at him into a sonic boom.

"Roar!"

This time, pain was evident in the blood and flesh monster's roar.

Unfortunately, the battle-savvy A Ke clearly would not hesitate due to this, missing a golden opportunity.

Swoosh!

The robe covering his body was cast aside.

A Ke, in his three-headed, six-armed form, leaped up like a praying mantis, firing bullet-like finger bones at the core of the blood and flesh monster.

Da da da...

Every shot of a finger bone promptly regenerated another section.

Unlike the Godslaying Spear of the War of Two Realms.

The finger bones A Ke was firing now were powered by the Explosive Insect's secretions.

Although this significantly weakened the power of the finger bones, it allowed A Ke to use this method of firing as a regular attack tactic.

In this regard, no one had a better firsthand understanding of this than the current blood and flesh monster.

—Godslaying Skill: Bone Dance!

"Roar!"

Roaring time and again, in fits of rage...

The blood and flesh monster attempted to counterattack A Ke, but couldn't even touch a hair of his.

With supersonic speed and powerful jumping ability.

A Ke stayed on the edge of the blood and flesh monster's attack range, firing rapidly regenerating sections of finger bone, trying to find its true weakness.

Da da da...

After several probing attempts, as if realizing something, A Ke suddenly paused.

Then, A Ke drew out his six ribs with his six arms, transforming them into various weapons as he approached the blood and flesh monster.

Clang! Clang! Clang!

In an instant, the collision between the blood and flesh monster and A Ke made a sound reminiscent of clashing metal.

It had never expected A Ke to engage it in close combat.

With wisdom, but not much, the blood and flesh monster at this moment showed its ferocious beast-like side.

"Roar!"

Horrifying waves of flesh surged towards its main body from all directions.

The blood and flesh monster seemed determined to end A Ke's life in this brute force manner.
