

The Growth 215

Chapter 215 23: Mechanical Ascension (2/3)

At the same time, in the Cyber Eden.

Completely transforming himself into the mainframe of the Eden, David at this moment had no concrete form.

His will exists extensively throughout every cyber space in Eden.

The vehicles and drones made of steel outside are his current body.

On this steel continent, gravity is generated by machinery, and barriers are created by magnetic fields.

If David wishes, he can even artificially create physical rules unique to this Cyber Eden.

The most important thing is that David is not an isolated, singular entity.

He... or rather, they are clearly divided, researching, manufacturing, fighting, planning, and even plundering, every operation of Cyber Eden involves David's participation.

In this Cyber Eden, David realized his dream of "peace"—a "peace" unique to Cyber Life.

"Self-exploitation..."

"In a certain sense, this is indeed a form of 'peace'."

Standing on the body that David once used, Chi sighed slightly mournfully.

In Chi's understanding, from the moment David chose to abandon his own will and completely become the mainframe of the Cyber Eden, he was already dead.

Now those omnipresent electronic lives are just new entities bred from David's soul.

Although they inherited David's memory, David's wisdom, and even David's emotions, they are ultimately not the original David.

In this regard, David as the mainframe of Eden appears more obvious.

In order to efficiently maintain the operation of Cyber Eden, mainframe David has nearly eradicated all emotions, maintaining his existence in a purely rational and logical manner.

"This is what I learned from the 'Intelligent Mechanism Camp', the 'Buddha' they speak of is an existence like me."

A cold and mechanical voice sounded in Chi's ear.

David could still understand the emotional nuances in Chi's words, but he could no longer empathize with them.

But David did not regret, because the closer he got to the truth of the world, the more he could perceive the essence of its operation.

Now he truly exists in this world as a God, a True God descending in the form of a "Saint".

Next, David will use his own technology to replicate the "Klein Bottle" that only exists in a high-dimensional world, completely allowing this steel city to exist apart from the World of Fallen Gods.

By that time, this floating steel continent will form a self-sufficient, infinitely cycling Divine Kingdom.

David calls this process—Mechanical Ascension!

Bang! Bang! Bang!

The commotion caused by Mechanical Ascension was far greater than David had imagined.

A high-dimensional world is inherently a completely enclosed "Klein Bottle", where everything internally is perfectly self-consistent.

The current World of Fallen Gods, although operating in an unconscious state due to the fallen Innate Gods, still possesses an instinctual awareness of crisis.

Therefore, when the World of Fallen Gods senses that part of its matter and energy is about to escape its control, an invisible counterattack came.

First came the advent of misfortune and bad luck.

During the Ascension of Cyber Eden, there were continuous unexpected events and obstacles.

From internal imbalances to external interferences, David timely adjusted various countermeasures to prevent this floating steel continent from falling again.

Even so, Cyber Eden was tilting and collapsing at a visible speed.

That was the entire World of Fallen Gods resisting Cyber Eden from taking away its matter and energy, which was a challenge every Ascender attempting to establish an "Earthly Divine Kingdom" must face.

The most difficult Path to Divinity has never been just words.

Secondly, when Cyber Eden's departure from the world caused such a great commotion, it inevitably attracted the attention of all beings in this world.

This naturally included Ascenders from All Heavens and Myriad Realms.

Shush! Shush! Shush!

Almost simultaneously as Cyber Eden attempted to ascend.

Streams of light rushed from all directions towards the sky, heading towards the giant steel continent.

An Ascender is at their most vulnerable during Ascension.

The only opportunity to slay a God is at this moment.

Otherwise, once Cyber Eden leaves the World of Fallen Gods, no one will be able to cross dimensions to hunt a True God.

"Detected malicious attacks, verifying data..."

"Database verification complete, confirming the identity of the attackers..."

"Locking targets, counterattack program initiated..."

As those streams of light symbolizing "Ascenders" approached Cyber Eden, the counterattack program of this steel city was thoroughly activated.

Shush! Shush! Shush!

Far brighter beams than those of the Ascenders shot down from the sky.

These are highly energetic laser beams grounded in the rules of physics, yet surpassing them.

Even when facing Ascenders capable of bending rules, those concentrated and high-energy laser beams could still inflict substantial damage.

"Ah!"

"Damn it!"

"How is it possible?"

...

In just the blink of an eye, several Ascenders, unable to react in time, were directly shot down, their life or death unknown.

Seeing this situation, the remaining Ascenders scattered, either enlarging, becoming elemental, or transforming into escape light, launching fierce attacks on Cyber Eden once more.

In this scenario, David's mechanical and indifferent voice resounded from within the Cyber Eden again.

"Ascension program initiated!"

In an instant, the gigantic Cyber Eden bizarrely virtualized.

No, that wasn't virtualization, it was digitization!

Dark green circuits appeared in every corner of Cyber Eden, streams of data moving from virtual to reality completely blurring the boundaries of dimension.

Before the Ascenders realized what this meant, those virtual data streams surprisingly turned into reality.

"That's... me?"

"Is it an illusion? Or a mirror projection?"

"No! Those are real!"

...

Looking at those bionic clone entities manifesting from their own data.

The eyes of the Ascenders widened in disbelief at the sight before them.

One must understand, Ascenders are no ordinary beings; they are extraordinary existences that warp world rules and influence reality with their own will.

In theory, even if someone could utilize their genes for cloning experiments, they would never be able to replicate their abilities.

However, the scene before them had completely overturned their understanding.

Never mind how David managed to steal the genetic data of so many Ascenders in the first place.

Just replicating the Ascenders' extraordinary abilities alone was not something achievable by ordinary technology.

This is Mechanical Ascension, which is the true trump card of Cyber Eden.
