

The Growth 240

Chapter 240: End of Volume: Light Realm (3/3)

"Is this the Light Realm?"

Looking up at the huge "ten thousand" symbol in the sky.

As a member of the Skeletons, Tianyou seemed a bit uncomfortable, even instinctively trying to block the light with his hand.

Fortunately, the Skeletons have evolved over such a long time and are no longer the original undead.

Otherwise, this light, which seemed like a natural enemy, suppressing all darkness and the dead, would be enough to destroy Tianyou, who was essentially still an undead.

"This is the Light Realm, also my former world."

On Tianyou's shoulder, a toy dog looked around, its words tinged with a touch of nostalgia.

The toy dog... or rather, Zhaoduro never expected to return in such a manner.

Like he never expected to be completely sealed in this toy body—an insult for any Ascender.

"..."

Thinking of this, Zhaoduro couldn't help but glance at Tianyou beside him, then fell silent for a long time.

As a third-generation Skeleton, Tianyou might not yet be an Ascender, but already possessed abilities beyond the imagination of ordinary beings.

His entire skeleton was made of metal, with a special galvanized coating on the surface providing corrosion and rust protection.

Theoretically, Tianyou's bones had the strength to withstand one hundred thousand tons of pressure under normal circumstances.

And when the need for combat arose, the "storage bones" in Tianyou's chest would release specially-made flesh and blood armor, quickly covering his entire body.

These flesh and blood armors were the latest products after countless generations of updates and iterations among the Skeletons.

Besides the most basic functions of protection and enhancement,

Scientists of the Skeletons also referenced the implant technology from the Burrowing Insect and David, adding numerous new functions to the flesh and blood armor.

This transformed the flesh and blood armor from being exclusive warrior equipment to a daily tool for all.

Here, it must be mentioned that although the third-generation Skeletons had gradually become the mainstream trend among the Skeletons, there were still many second-generation Skeletons or even first-generation Skeletons in the Mountain and Sea Realm.

The newborn Skeletons did not abandon these predecessors, but instead found ways to research various technologies, enabling them to keep up with the race's transformation and progress.

Most implants based on flesh and blood armor were created for these ancestors.

High-strength fiber tendons that could protect bones...

Special neurological implants that could enhance one's perception...

Excitatory hormones allowing the body to maintain high activeness for short periods...

Auxiliary brain cell control centers that formed automatically inside the skulls of Skeletons...

Biological reaction furnaces providing a continuous power source and microcurrents...

In a sense, Skeletons are evolving into a new kind of creature, an ultimate life form that can adjust its functions through subsequent adaptation to gain various extraordinary abilities.

From what Tianyou presently knew, a recently established institute in White Bone City had even begun research into remote communication implants.

These implants use bio-electric currents from the flesh and blood armor to generate special interactive fields for communication with other flesh and blood armors with the same implants.

This special interaction field is somewhat similar to the Information Network of the Burrowing Insect civilization, yet more convenient than their Information Network.

Each flesh and blood armor acts as an independent base station, capable of independently releasing interactive fields.

The interactions between base stations form a hive-like special cluster structure, enhancing the overall operational efficiency.

As for the basic computational power to run these interactions?

Besides the computational power provided by the Skeletons themselves, the major source of this computational power is the special brain cells generated within the Skeletons' skulls when their flesh and blood armor is activated.

In terms of spread and information density, this special communication implant can completely rival the electromagnetic communication systems on Earth.

.....

"So, why do the Prophets insist on me coming to the Light Realm for 'diplomatic relations'?"

Unable to adapt to the light, Tianyou once again looked up at the sky and finally chose to activate his flesh and blood armor.

Zzzzzz...

Accompanied by faint electric currents,

The red flesh proliferated and grew at a visible pace, quickly covering Tianyou's entire skeleton.

Then, the highly differentiated brain cells began to fill Tianyou's skull, giving him enhanced memory, calculation, and thinking abilities.

Without needing to consider various organs and biological circulation, these highly differentiated brain cells could even directly draw nutrients from the flesh and blood armor.

Once fully formed, this implant, which could be called an "artificial brain," began handling the subsequent differentiation steps, forming various implants with different functions according to the preset scheme.

Of course, the flesh and blood armor Tianyou used was not a regular model but rather a combat-oriented armor.

Hence, the generated implants leaned towards firepower, enhancement, and combat.

Sturdy skin armor, embedded mini firearms, aggressively enhancing functional biological components...

"Huff!"

When Tianyou opened his prosthetic eyes, the long-lost biological vision caused him to exhale deeply, creating a small vortex in front of him.

[Is this the foundation of the Supreme Elder?]

Such powerful cardiorespiratory functions made Zhaoduro glance sideways.

Sure enough, no matter how many times he witnessed it, the peculiar life forms of the Skeletons far exceeded Zhaoduro's understanding.

Clearly not Ascenders, yet possessing abilities comparable to ordinary Ascenders.

Bound by the physical rules of the world, yet capable of unleashing destruction akin to a celestial calamity.

To be captured by a world that could birth such anomalies, Zhaoduro admitted it was not unjust.

"Celestial Monarch Yan said you and Andiro were once friends. Can you find her now?"

In response to Tianyou's question, Zhaoduro nodded.

After all, this was the purpose of Tianyou bringing him to this world.

"I can help you find her, but it will take some time."

Understanding this, Tianyou didn't press further but suddenly formed a strange Dharma Seal with his hands.

Whoosh!

In an instant, an invisible storm transformed into a dragon around him.

Subsequent clouds also descended from the sky, turning into substantial chains.

——Exorcism Technique: Illusion Spirit!

"I don't trust you."

"So, for the time being, please behave yourself!"

Under Zhaoduro's astonished gaze, the storm dragon and cloud chains wound around his toy body one after another.

"Wait..."

Trying to open his mouth to explain something, Zhaoduro only managed to utter two words before watching himself being completely sealed.

"Heh, you thought you were here as a 'Messenger' for diplomatic relations?"

"You're nothing but a 'gift' to curry favor with Andiro."

A slight smile appeared at the corner of Tianyou's mouth, filled with disdain for Zhaoduro's obliviousness and attempts to bargain.

"Sun Chaser·Andiro, here I come!"