

The Growth 255

Chapter 255 15: True Game (3/3)

The "Game Spirit" is the Messenger of Tranyas, a virtual life form constructed purely of data.

Within the framework of the [Multiverse Game Hub], even true Gods only possess permissions equal to the "Game Spirit."

Of course, it's unlikely for a God to foolishly descend to another God's domain and engage in battles on unfamiliar ground.

Thus, in most instances, the "Game Spirit's" mission is to communicate with the Messengers of other Gods and assist them in integrating the "True Game" into the [Multiverse Game Hub] system.

Compared to those virtual games established through the [Multiverse Game Hub], each addition of a "True Game" signifies an increase in Tranyas' power.

This is a manifestation of the authority of the "God of Games, Contracts, and War," and Tranyas has never hidden this aspect from other Gods.

However, even in All Heavens and Myriad Realms, Gods willing to completely open their world to the [Multiverse Game Hub] are rare.

To express respect for such actions and to welcome Li Hao.

Tranyas remarkably issued a Divine Oracle personally, arranging for the highest-level "Game Spirit" under its command to engage with the newly created world.

Moreover, Tranyas has opened the supreme permissions, imposing no restrictions on that world.

If understood in a way that Li Hao could comprehend.

It's akin to Tranyas adding a server set to the [Multiverse Game Hub] in his honor, giving Li Hao full discretion over its use.

At the very least, in terms of permissions on this set of servers, Li Hao possesses the same level of access as Tranyas.

This generous gesture indirectly proves Tranyas' sincerity.

Thus, when the Game Spirit Lisi received this task, it felt both excited and anxious, fearing to botch the engagement task.

However, the development of events was smoother than Lisi had anticipated.

When the world temporarily named "Game Realm" by Li Hao was being connected to the [Multiverse Game Hub], Lisi did not need to make any adjustments or operations.

It seemed as if it naturally belonged to the [Multiverse Game Hub].

The internal rule evolution of the "Game Realm" perfectly adhered to the settings of the [Multiverse Game Hub].

Upon realizing this, Lisi discovered that the "Game Realm" inherently possessed a dimension capable of being digitized.

Within this data-centric [Multiverse Game Hub], that digitizable dimension was even more convenient and useful than the "data system" built into the Hub.

Even more shocking to Lisi was the fact that the Creator of the "Game Realm" did not set permissions on the [Ascension Ladder].

This implies that any player entering the "Game Realm" can ascend to divinity through the world's rules, unlike other True Games limited by "rewards."

Theoretically, as long as a player in the "Game Realm" has sufficient talent, they can completely replicate a full [Ascension Ladder] in their world.

"What a generous God!"

Lisi had seen many Gods in need of Tranyas, and had witnessed many True Games choosing to open their worlds.

But they either had extremely high requirements for player qualifications.

Or stipulated that "spoils" gained within the game could not be taken back to their world.

Only a few generous Gods allow players to gain "rewards" from their worlds.

For this reason, as the true manager of the [Multiverse Game Hub]—Tranyas has often subsidized the groups of players participating in True Games.

Yet, in the cyber dimension where information can be materialized, players can not only attempt different [Ascension Ladders], even artifacts within the game can be taken to their world.

"Is this the new world created by the Creator?"

When Tianyou opened its eyes again, it found itself in a grand and magnificent temple.

Lowering its head slowly, Tianyou noticed that its current appearance was not its original form, but a two-faced, four-armed, muscular and mighty Vajra.

Most crucially, a virtual screen appeared in Tianyou's vision that only it could see.

Blinking involuntarily, not used to this perspective, Tianyou fell silent.

And during this short silence, the data information on the virtual screen in front of it refreshed with a new interface.

Just as Tianyou had finished looking at his new identity, the rapid sound of footsteps suddenly came from the temple entrance not far away.

Subsequently, a humanoid monster covered with red scales and a ferocious face pushed open the temple doors.

"Tianyou?"

The crimson-scaled monster looked up at the towering Tianyou, tentatively making a sound.

Upon hearing this familiar voice, Tianyou immediately realized the identity of the other party.

"Shuli?"

Upon hearing this, the incarnation of the Crimson Scaled Demon, Shuli, shrugged habitually, then opened its mouth to correct.

"My current identity is Wu Qi, a minor temple BOSS."

Covered in black lines looking at how quickly Shuli had adapted to the role, Tianyou also looked up at the direction outside the temple.

Then, as expected, a large group of strangely shaped monsters rushed in one after the other, and they exchanged curious and teasing glances.

"Haha! I unexpectedly became an elite monster, I thought I would be assigned some lowly role!"

"I'm comparatively unlucky, I'm just an outermost wild monster of the temple."

"If you're talking about miserable, could you guys be more miserable than me? I'm a dedicated NPC guiding those players!"

"Hehe, I'm a bit better than you, I'm an escort within the temple, only responsible for giving those players tasks and changing professions."

...

In a cacophony of rising and falling voices, the identities of these monsters were fully revealed.

They are all Mountain and Sea People from the Mountain and Sea Realm, now responsible for playing corresponding NPC roles in this game world.
