

The Growth 322

Chapter 322 - 13: Epic Creature · Fox Dragon

With the widespread use of communication implants, the speed of information transmission in the Mountain and Sea Realm had already reached the level of a modern society.

Therefore, the news of the epic creatures making a comeback quickly spread across all the artificial islands at the edge of the Chishui River.

Without any hesitation or delay, the Mountain and Sea People stationed on the artificial islands sprang into action, intending to keep the enemy at bay beyond the Chishui River.

First were the Skeletons on the artificial islands.

The Skeletons chosen to participate in this mission were engineers who had specialized in combat skills.

Utilizing the massive amount of bone material on the artificial islands, a vast array of war weapons and battleships were produced, appearing on the battlefield in the most cost-effective manner.

For the current Skeletons, manufacturing simple fixed artillery and autonomous mechanics was no longer a difficult task.

These engineers with combat specialization skills focused more on the production and maintenance of industrial matrices and then used these matrices to mass-produce fixed artillery and autonomous mechanics.

Assisting the Skeletons were their corresponding Merfolk partners.

The Merfolk generally possessed abilities to manipulate seawater and perceive water domain crises, significantly improving the engineers' efficiency and helping them escape when necessary.

Next to appear on the battlefield was the Lingyu Army.

Also a member of the Hundred Races of Mountains and Seas, the Lingyu often appeared as subordinate units or affiliated races to the Merfolk, and this time was no exception.

The immense number of Lingyu synchronized their voices, creating huge waves, which surged at the edge of the Chishui River.

Amidst the vast numbers of Lingyu, a few fully armed Merfolk emerged, riding unicorns, battling, and slaughtering the powerful epic creatures in the waves.

These fully armed Merfolk had implanted various combat sequence implants and cultivated different sequences of the Ascension Ladder.

Together with the fully armed unicorns.

Even if they were not Ascenders, they displayed combat power surpassing ordinary Ascenders.

Indeed, in the current Mountain and Sea Realm, Ascenders remain synonymous with "top strong warriors."

But those Mountain and Sea People who had adequately prepared and undergone long-term combat training also possessed power comparable to Ascenders.

If confronting those mysterious exotic realm Ascenders, these elite Mountain and Sea People could effortlessly defeat and slay them.

This is not just a boastful claim but is supported by numerous real cases and facts.

Those true game players in the Game Realm who were surpassed by the wild monsters and bosses played by the Mountain and Sea People are the best evidence.

Almost every Mountain and Sea Person aspiring to become a warrior had entered the Game Realm and undergone countless blood-and-fire battles and trials.

On the shore of the Chishui River, the waves surged.

When the war officially commenced, a battle destined to be recorded in history unfolded.

In the midst of the intense cannon firing, the Merfolk Knights, riding unicorns, charged into the fray, shredding through the ranks of epic giant beasts.

Although the Lingyu following them did not have the same mighty power as the Merfolk Knights.

By harnessing their ability to manipulate waves, the Lingyu did not fall behind when confronting the epic creatures.

Because the Lingyu were not fighting alone; they operated in small teams and legions, working collectively.

With the help of communication implants, the Lingyu demonstrated nearly seamless coordination and response, quickly suppressing the isolated epic creatures.

Bang! Bang! Bang!

The roar of cannons and the crashing waves...

Along with the beast-like roars and sounds of strife that echoed occasionally, it imparted an extraordinary sense of brutality.

Fortunately, apart from a few exceptions, the majority of the roaring came from the epic creatures.

Be it the Merfolk Knights or the Lingyu Army...

Whenever casualties appeared on their lines, they were promptly replaced.

During those times, the artificial islands built on the edge of the Chishui River served as places for rescuing and accommodating the wounded.

The engineers among the Skeletons were not only mechanical engineers; they were also biological and life engineers.

As long as they aren't killed on the spot, any injured brought to the artificial islands could receive effective treatment, potentially without impacting future abilities.

Under such circumstances, the epic creatures, who had taken the initiative to attack, quickly found themselves in a predicament.

In a civilization where the level of technology was completely overpowering, even epic creatures possessing transcendent abilities could not fully leverage their advantages.

Conversely, under the encroachment of the allied forces, more and more epic creatures were snapping out of their berserk state.

"Roar!"

As the invasion was about to be repelled by the coalition forces, a loud dragon roar suddenly emanated from the rear of the epic creatures.

Instantly, dark clouds gathered and air currents surged.

A large number of Merfolk and Lingyu, caught off guard, were knocked unconscious by the waves, sinking to the seabed.

"Roar!"

Another dragon roar followed.

This time, the owner of the roar finally revealed its true form.

It was an epic creature resembling both a dragon and a fox, and it was an epic creature that had stepped into the ranks of Ascenders.

Its dragon-like slender body weaved through the clouds, terrifying thunder spilling from its sleek white fur...

As this epic creature descended from the dark clouds at high altitude.

Its massive fox-like head exuded a mysterious sense of majesty, unmistakably identifying it as one of the leaders of the epic creatures.

"It's the Fox Dragon!"

Upon recognizing the identity of the Fox Dragon at a glance, a Merfolk Knight at the forefront of the line passed this information to the rear.

Just like other singular race epic creatures, the Fox Dragon was also unique in the Mountain and Sea Realm.

Before becoming an Ascender, it already wielded the power of thunder.

Using static electricity generated by fur friction, the Fox Dragon once repelled several Ascenders attempting to besiege it.

From that moment on, the Fox Dragon developed great malice towards the Mountain and Sea People, repeatedly destroying their cities and buildings on land.

Before being driven to the South Sea, the Fox Dragon was a target every Mountain and Sea Person attempting to become a "Pioneer" had to watch out for.

When such an epic creature gained wisdom and embarked on the Ascension Ladder, its danger level skyrocketed.
