

The Growth 364

Chapter 364 - 10: Ghost God Egg

"So, I am actually a 'Demigod of the Thunder Divine Position'?"

Having listened to the Mountain Demon's account, Kuilong said this as he stepped into the Mountain Entrance Thunder Pool.

This place is the central area of the entire mountain entrance, also where numerous Azure Dragon embryos gather.

Everywhere you look, charred remnants are scattered, yet, the newborn Azure Dragons are few and far between.

In the cruel laws of nature, survival of the fittest reigned.

Those newborn Azure Dragons cast aside all the innocence and naivety of juvenile creatures, baring their teeth and roaring to intimidate nearby peers.

Some of the more clever juvenile Azure Dragons chose to feed on their fellow remains nearby, thereby starting the first stage of their lives.

"In our Mountain and Sea Realm, there's no such thing as a 'Thunder Divine Position'..."

"At least until the Creator selects a 'Thunder Apostle', no god dares to claim the title of 'God of Thunder'."

The Mountain Demon's voice seemed to lower considerably, unwilling to directly face those young Azure Dragons preying on each other.

"I think your divine position might be more in the areas of electromagnetic waves, electric induction, electric light, electric current and other more fragmented domains..."

The concept of "thunder" is far too broad.

Under the control of the Celestial Tao System, it's almost impossible for "thunder" to serve as a prefix for a single divine position.

Instead, more fragmented domains related to thunder and lightning are quite likely to become standard prefixes for such demigods.

As far as the Mountain Demon knows, the famed "Electromagnetic City" in the Mountain and Sea Civilization was built by a demigod with the "Electromagnetic Divine Position."

It is also under the impetus of that demigod that technology related to electricity in the Mountain and Sea Civilization caught up with the Burrowing Insect Civilization in a short period.

"Fragmented domains?"

Stretching hand towards the central thunder, Kuilong merely smiled noncommittally.

The next second, the surging thunder instantly converged toward Kuilong's arm.

Crackle... crackle...

If it could be said that the earlier thunder in this area existed almost in a liquid form, then when Kuilong manipulated the thunder to gather in his palm, a pitch-black spherical lightning ball appeared abruptly in this world.

As highly compressed electric energy, this spherical lightning contained enough energy to destroy an entire mountain range.

Upon witnessing this scene, those newborn Azure Dragons nearby all displayed a shivering appearance.

No one understands more than these naturally electricity-storing cell-bearing Azure Dragons, the terrifying power contained within the spherical lightning.

"What are you doing?"

Out of the instinct of a Ghost God, the Mountain Demon asked, equally fearful.

"I want to see what is hidden beneath this Thunder Pool!"

With one hand upholding that spherical lightning, Kuilong set his gaze on a pillar not far away.

That is the core of the entire Thunder Pool, also a spine left behind after a dragon's death.

Thanks to the function of that spine, the thunder in the sky continuously struck down, gathering in this Thunder Pool.

Yet, this piece of theoretically "dead matter" spine displayed a bizarre, almost biological-like activity on its surface.

"What is that thing!?"

Gazing at that spine too, the Mountain Demon perceived it clearer than Kuilong.

Because beneath that spine, the Mountain Demon distinctly felt some kind of power similar to that of a Ghost God.

"Whatever that thing is, my actions have already alarmed them."

Stepping slowly toward that spine, only then did Kuilong feel the vastness of the other side.

Speaking of Kuilong's physique, even among normal humanoid creatures, he could be considered a rather large type.

Yet, even with his nearly five meters of height, it didn't reach a third of the spine's height.

From this, it is evident that the owner of this spine must have been one of the strongest Canglong individuals even while alive.

Roar!

Seemingly aware of Kuilong and the Mountain Demon's malice, the entity hidden within the spine finally couldn't resist manifesting itself.

In an undulating movement as if alive, some spinal cord-like material surged forth from the spine.

"Nether Material?"

As soon as those spine-like materials fully took form, the Mountain Demon immediately exclaimed its name in shock.

This is a kind of substance between tangible and spiritual, one that should originally only appear in the Netherworld.

However, what truly shocked the Mountain Demon was, upon appearing in the Mountain and Sea Realm, these materials automatically formed an egg-like structure.

"Ya! Ya! Ya!"

That is a live egg, similar to a chicken egg.

On the surface of this fiery egg, twisted features imitated from the Azure Dragon were arranged in a dislocated manner.

It seemed to be wailing, yet also as if roaring in anger...

The distorted features on the surface of the live egg emitted roars of inscrutable meaning, causing every creature that heard it to feel restless and unsettled involuntarily.

Especially those newly born young Azure Dragons, each showing pain and struggle on their faces.

This is a spiritual impact, and also a malice that no non-spiritual life can resist.

Fortunately, the Mountain Demon was not an ordinary creature; as a high-ranking Ghost God, it reacted immediately, reaching out and grabbing it directly.

Crunch!

In an instant, the once-howling live egg emitted a crisp sound.

This time, it was the live egg's twisted features that showed expressions of fear.

Unfortunately, at this moment, the Mountain Demon didn't have the mentality to care about the live egg's expression but instead disengaged from Kuilong's body with a heavy heart.

"This is a Ghost God Egg!"

"A forbidden egg that should not have been born!"

Seeing Kuilong's puzzled expression, the Mountain Demon could only further explain.

"This Thunder Pool isn't only for nurturing young Azure Dragons, it's also nurturing Ghost God Eggs."

"The Canglong Race naturally possesses extraordinary wisdom, and their souls are born strong."

"This Thunder Pool uses the most primitive means to incubate Canglongs, while those failed Canglong souls are absorbed by this Ghost God Egg."

"Just think, how many Azure Dragon Islands are in this nearby sea?"

"And then think about whether new Azure Dragon Islands form after those Canglongs fall?"

"With such a cycle repeating endlessly, can you imagine how many Ghost God Eggs exist in this sea?"

Hearing this, Kuilong instantly realized the severity of the problem.

"Are such Ghost God Eggs... very dangerous?"

Without hesitation, the Mountain Demon nodded affirmatively, emphasizing with no exaggeration in his tone.

"Mount and Sea Realm and the Netherworld are two worlds with fundamentally different rules, the living and the dead are also two distinct life forms."

"Yet, this Ghost God Egg tries to hatch a native Ghost God in the Mountain and Sea Realm."

"The person behind this is equivalent to imitating the Goddess of Death's authority, attempting to create a life form that can traverse between the realms like the Netherworld Race."