

The Growth 371

Chapter 371 - 17: Joining the Mountain and Sea Divine Pantheon

No matter what kind of race or civilization.

The education of offspring has always been an urgent, cannot be neglected matter.

The Azure Dragon Race, having initially entered the stage of civilization, is naturally no exception.

If it is a race that naturally enters the stage of civilization.

Once the individuals of the race meet the most basic survival needs, they then enter a period of contemplation and exploration.

During this period, individuals observe various phenomena in nature and then use their own ways to understand their existence.

The most primitive faiths, the most original totems are mostly born during this time.

Although the Canglong Race is a race with members who are all epic creatures, in this respect they will not overly violate objective laws.

The difference lies only in the fact that, due to their own excessive strength, there are few natural phenomena that truly cause the Canglong to feel fear or are worth their contemplation.

Of course, all the above are phenomena that occur according to normal development.

With the involvement of ten dragons including Geng Chen, the faith in the Creator and the comprehension of the Mountain and Sea Gods naturally became common knowledge among the Canglong Race.

Especially the new generation of Canglongs, they all greatly admire, even revere, the supreme Creator.

What took Geng Chen by surprise was, among the new generation of Canglongs, there were prophets who were devoutly dedicated to the Creator.

It must be understood that another name for Prophets is Wise Men.

This wisdom is not reflected in knowledge reserves but in the contemplation of the operational logic of all things.

Anyone who can be called a "Prophet" has the ability to see through appearances and grasp the essence.

This means that there must be individuals in the current Canglong Race who have discerned the origins and intentions of Geng Chen and the others.

Yet, for some unknown reason.

Those prophets have not exposed the intentions of Geng Chen and the others, instead continuing to execute their plans as usual.

This made Geng Chen suspect at some point whether the wisdom of the prophets was exaggerated by the high-ranking members of Zhiku.

As long as the plan can proceed on schedule, despite all his doubts, Geng Chen had no intention of alerting the enemy.

After all, compared to the prophets, what truly keeps Geng Chen and the Mountain and Sea Civilization on guard is that Ghost Dragon who never shows up.

Indeed, even though Geng Chen has introduced the faith in the Creator and the Mountain and Sea Civilization into the Canglong's population, the Ghost Dragon hidden behind the scenes has never appeared.

If this continues, the Canglong Race will eventually recognize themselves as "Mountain and Sea People."

By then, even if the Ghost Dragon ascends to the Divine Throne, it can only become a new god of the Mountain and Sea Civilization, rather than a unique God of the Canglong Race.

"So what exactly is that Ghost Dragon waiting for?"

Perched above the Creator Altar established by the Canglong Race, Geng Chen gazed deeply in the direction of Yu Yuan.

At this point, Geng Chen had to acknowledge that all his prepared contingencies were ineffective.

That Ghost Dragon hidden in the Nether Spring had never shown itself from the beginning.

If it weren't for the firm confirmation of its existence by the Mountain and Sea Civilization, Geng Chen wouldn't believe any God of a Race would watch other civilizations assimilating their race.

This is not a matter of good or evil, purely the stance of a God of a Race.

Even if the Mountain and Sea Civilization truly carries no malice, even if the Canglong Race can benefit from this...

"Anyway, the Creator Altar has been established."

At this moment, a Canglong who came with Geng Chen flew over and spoke in a deliberately lowered tone.

The establishment of the Creator Altar signifies that the Canglong Race has formally established faith in the Creator and acknowledged the existence of the Mountain and Sea Gods.

From the moment the Creator Altar was formed, it means the integration of the Canglong Race into the Mountain and Sea Civilization will not be interrupted.

"It is precisely because the process is so smooth that it warrants vigilance and attention."

Unlike his companion's ease, Geng Chen continuously believed the Ghost Dragon must have some other plot.

Otherwise, it simply can't explain why the other party is capable of such patience.

No, the behavior of the Ghost Dragon can no longer be described as patience.

"It's simply like going with the flow..."

As Geng Chen muttered this to himself, his eyes suddenly widened, and his face shifted from suspicion to shock.

"Going with the flow? Is that Ghost Dragon going with the flow?"

Before the words were completely out, ripples suddenly appeared in Yu Yuan at the end of Geng Chen's line of sight.

Immediately afterwards, the ripples turned into a vortex, quickly exposing itself to the sight of all the Canglong.

Those Canglongs, who had originally gathered for the Creator Altar, stared wide-eyed at the vortex, utterly clueless about what it signified.

"Stay here and don't move!"

"I'm going to see what's happening over there!"

Accompanied by a thunderous roar, Geng Chen's voice echoed in all the Canglongs' ears.

And before the Canglongs could react, Geng Chen was already leading the charge flying towards the direction of the vortex.

During this process, countless lightning bolts emanated from Geng Chen's body, and its size quickly expanded and grew larger.

Thrum—Boom!

In the blink of an eye, Geng Chen left behind shadows and loud booms from breaking the sound barrier.

Seeing this situation, the Canglongs along the way had to hurriedly give way to prevent being collided by the high-speed flying Geng Chen.

However, including Geng Chen, most Canglongs failed to notice.

The prophets of the Cang Race, as if expecting it, merely silently watched Geng Chen heading towards the vortex without showing much surprise.

At the same time, within the observation station on the frontlines of Yu Yuan.

"Detected 'Divine Level Abnormal Wave' phenomenon..."

"Target is being locked, target location confirmed—Yu Yuan!"

"Data is being verified, data verification successful—Ghost Dragon!"

Amongst the rising and falling screams, Kuilong remained unfazed at the center, not once shaken by the anticipated startling change.

"Finally couldn't hold back?"

"But choosing to ascend to divinity at this moment seems a bit too late, doesn't it?"

A fleeting doubt crossed Kuilong's mind as he continues to calmly direct the staff to gather various intelligence.

No matter what scheme that Ghost Dragon has, since it chose to act now, Kuilong will not easily let it go.

"Notify the rear, Fu Xiang must receive our signal before making a move!"

Cautious by nature, Kuilong hesitated for a moment but ultimately added a command.

Before the truth of the entire event is clarified, Kuilong does not plan to completely fall out with the Ghost Dragon.

If possible, getting the other party to join the Mountain and Sea Gods is the best, optimal choice.
