"Father God..."

"If your presence is truly as great as Balian described, could you please save A Dui?"

Climbing the enormous steps on foot, Luo Fu finally reached the altar of the "Eye of the Creator." She looked up at what seemed to be the eternal Eye of the Sun, softly pleading.

"I know this request is selfish, but I can't bear to see A Dui just die like this..."

"No one wants to see A Dui perish, not even Balian..."

Like most of the Immortals, Luo Fu rambled on with an increasingly sorrowful tone.

"For a long time, I've thought that maybe one day A Dui would die."

"I hate this feeling of helplessness, so I've been trying to improve the 'Ascension Ladder' taught by A Xin..."

"Here, I confess to you!"

"To improve the 'Ascension Ladder,' I've secretly conducted many experiments on living beings without telling Balian..."

"But no creature other than ourselves can withstand the backlash of the Sun Essence, nor can anyone endure the steps of body reconstruction."

"So, my approach to letting A Dui become an Ascender to extend its life has made no progress."

Theoretically, once becoming an Ascender, it would indeed significantly improve the aging problem of Dragon Wolf Ah Dui.

Nevertheless, the "Ascension to Divinity Technique" taught by Hua She is too domineering, not suitable for ordinary creatures.

Even if Luo Fu has improved it several times, minimizing the Sun Essence's destruction to ordinary biological bodies.

But for the aging Dragon Wolf Ah Dui, it's still somewhat too fierce.

Moreover, it's uncertain if Dragon Wolf Ah Dui, who has an intelligence below ten, can even comprehend the steps of bodily reconstruction.

"Of course, I actually have another method..."

"After A Dui's death, I could extract its bones and place them closest to the Day of Sin."

"Then, maybe A Dui could live again?"

After a slight pause, Luo Fu continued to speak softly.

"However, Balian certainly wouldn't agree with me on this method."

"And whether what comes back is still A Dui is another major question mark."

"I don't want to gamble on that possibility..."

"So the last method I could think of was to ask you."

"I'm not as reserved as Balian, nor like others who keep a respectful distance from you..."

"A Xin once said that you are actually a very gentle 'God'..."

.....

Can Li Hao hear Luo Fu's plea?

The answer is undoubtedly yes.

In fact, even before Luo Fu went to the Creator Altar to pray, Li Hao had already noticed the aging Dragon Wolf Ah Dui.

After all, in the entire group of Immortals, it wasn't just Luo Fu who was worried about Dragon Wolf Ah Dui's lifespan.

Until Luo Fu, disregarding Balian's rules, quietly climbed the Creator Altar, did Li Hao notice this particularly different Immortal.

A youthful appearance, a lively personality, a genius mind, and a tireless curiosity...

These were all traits that Li Hao himself didn't possess, yet now they were vividly present in Luo Fu.

Thus, Li Hao, intrigued by this, began to trace the past of Luo Fu and was astonished to find Luo Fu's "abnormality" indeed made sense.

Generally speaking, Immortals were born from Li Hao's body.

Due to the battle with the Candle Dragon back then, the majority of Immortals had physical defects.

Luo Fu was the only exception, her birthing body was fairly intact.

Li Hao tried to recall the battle at that time and finally remembered how he died back then.

[Drinking the heart blood of the Candle Dragon, then falling from a high altitude and dying from a head injury?]

Looking at the scene from his memory speechlessly.

Li Hao never expected that among all his ways of dying, there was one so ridiculous.

Forcing open the Candle Dragon's heart and drinking its heart blood was acceptable.

But being thrown off by an enraged Candle Dragon and dying with a broken head was too much.

Indeed, the head was crushed.

Yet ironically, it resulted in a concussion, leaving the body intact.

Perhaps for this reason, Luo Fu was initially silly and simple, a type easily identified as a "fool."

If it wasn't for most Immortals having various defects and lacking a great moral sense of good and evil.

With Luo Fu's intelligence at the time, she surely wouldn't have escaped bullying and harassment.

Still, the ones willing to sincerely teach Luo Fu and play with her were only Balian and A Dui.

During this process, Luo Fu naturally developed a deep attachment to Balian and A Dui.

After A Xin brought back the "Ascension to Divinity Technique," Luo Fu, with Balian's full support, repeatedly broke through her own limits and eventually completed her bodily remolding.

The lack of intelligence, plus psychological immaturity...

After remolding, Luo Fu became a little girl—a little girl deeply attached to Balian and A Dui.

However, if just this, Luo Fu would at most be merely an ordinary member of the Immortal group, far from achieving her current accomplishments.

The real critical point was the heart blood from the Candle Dragon within Luo Fu's body.

Upon becoming an Ascender and acquiring the mythical ability of the [Ascension Ladder], the heart blood of the Candle Dragon was naturally activated.

Thus, Luo Fu became the smartest, most curious individual among the Immortal group.

It was she who discovered the initial Sun Stone and proposed the concept of creating the "Eye of the Creator."

And over thousands of years, she repeated experiments countless times and finally found a way to artificially synthesize Sun Stones.

She even made many interesting gadgets using this special energy source.

Although, Luo Fu's original intention was merely to mitigate the side effects of the [Ascension Ladder].
