

The Growth 60

Chapter 60 - 12: 11 Dimensions

[...]

Silently listening to the heart of Hua She.

This may be the first time since meeting the other party that Li Hao so clearly heard the other's prayers.

Although the purpose and content of the other party's prayers were to preemptively shift blame, it also showed Hua She's trepidation at what Yao Xin was doing now.

The essence of the Ascension Ladder is to transform mortal beings into True Gods.

On this Path to Divinity taught by Hua She, "opening the Celestial Gate" is merely the first step.

In the presence of True Gods, reshaping one's own body and soul, and mimicking the logic of the world's operation to create a perfect Innate Form is still far from sufficient.

The next step for the Ascender is to gradually surpass the dimension of Life and truly become an existence comparable to the natural world.

This is a long and arduous process.

The vast majority of Ascenders fall during this process, becoming sacrifices on the immortal path of the Ascension Ladder.

However, there are exceptions and shortcuts to everything.

The immortal path of the Ascension Ladder is naturally no exception.

If an Ascender is fortunate enough to obtain everything from a God, it naturally follows that they can replace its position and become a New God.

Of course, anyone who performs such actions, regardless of whether they were Ascenders in the past or not, will be labeled as "blasphemous."

The difference lies in that a typical "blasphemy" merely involves stealing some of the abilities and faith of the Gods, but they intend to fundamentally replace the existence of True Gods.

Undoubtedly, what Yao Xin was about to do next would be considered blasphemous in the eyes of all the Gods.

Even Hua She was unsure if Li Hao would feel such a sense of kinship disturbance because of it.

To this, detecting Hua She's little thought, Li Hao merely gave a faint smile.

After all, in terms of "blasphemy," who could compare to himself, who had replaced the position of the Candle Dragon?

.....

[Is this another world?]

As Yao Xin's Primordial Spirit entered the Spirit Realm, Li Hao also saw this spiritual world distinctly different from the material world.

This world has the concept of spatial orientation, the concept of energy transformation of things, and the concept of time for the movement of everything, but it alone lacks the concept of material entities.

Everything visible seems to be an untouchable "void."

Yet, apart from this, this world is no different from the material world where Li Hao usually resides.

It is still observable, still perceptible, still active...

From Li Hao's current perspective, he could even clearly see vivid mountains and rivers, busy wraiths, as if they were a mirror image of the material world.

This shocking scene inevitably reminded Li Hao of an interesting theory he had once seen in the Civilization Game-Official Hall.

According to a certain "Dimensional God" who had researched the concept of dimensions.

Including the Ascension Area and Fallen Area, the entire cosmic entity can actually be divided into eleven dimensions.

These dimensions include the most fundamental concepts of energy, material, space, time, information, and others, which are the cornerstones of constructing all things in the universe.

However, although these eleven dimensions are the building blocks of the universe.

Under certain conditions, worlds lacking one or two of these dimensions can also exist.

The void world lacking the concept of time...

The low-dimensional world lacking the concept of space...

The desolate world lacking the concept of information...

The frozen world lacking the concept of energy...

And the world at hand seems to be a mirror world lacking the concept of material entities.

Or more precisely, the "Spirit Realm" perceived by the Gods actually refers to worlds without the concept of mass.

Due to the inherent particularity of such worlds, they can almost prevent the invasion of most Foreigners, making them favored by the Death Element Gods.

After all, the Death Element Gods do not require living beings as followers.

As long as there is a place to house and accommodate wraiths, some Death Gods do not mind joining an already formed large Divine Pantheon.

Netherworld, Underworld, Spirit Realm, Netherworld...

These are common names in many Divine Pantheons, often originating from this.

[What's that?]

While Li Hao was pondering what this world was all about, his gaze was suddenly drawn to a huge mountain not far away.

Although it was deep in the Spirit Realm, that mountain seemed to possess the concept of "entities."

The wraiths that could originally infiltrate and traverse one another chose to detour as though they were in the material world when they reached this giant mountain.

This bizarre scene seemed highly suspicious to Li Hao.

Unfortunately, Li Hao's current perspective remains in the "fog of war" state, able only to follow Yao Xin's Primordial Spirit's actions.

Unable to glimpse the full appearance of that massive object, Li Hao eventually focused his attention on other parts of this world.

It was only at this time that Li Hao discovered that this world actually had no light.

No, it's not just as simple as lacking light.

In a monotonous gray tone, most of the wraiths in this world appeared dispirited and desolate.

If not for them continuing their activities, Li Hao might have doubted whether this was a world without Life.

[Where is the 'God' of this world?]

Unable to refrain, Li Hao switched perspectives again and began to seriously search for traces of "God's" existence.

Since there are still active wraiths in this world, the "God" ruling over it must still be alive.

Only when all things are extinguished and the world collapses will the True God as the "Lord of the World" completely fall.

This is a piece of common knowledge about the Gods, as well as Li Hao's experience gained firsthand.

[Where the hell is this world's 'God' hiding?]

As Yao Xin gradually expanded her scope of activity, Li Hao's consciousness also began to break through.

But, precisely because of this, the more he perceived and understood, the more Li Hao was astonished by this world's desolation and ruin.

The Mountain and Sea Realm, after all, is a world that has re-ascended from the Fallen Area, and it still preserved the world's original appearance.

However, in this world before us, except for the framework of the "world" itself, nothing exists.

Then... the question arises.

In a world where nothing exists, how have those wraiths survived until now?

And what is the situation with the God secretly hiding behind the scenes?
