The Dance

Chapter 26 The Dance

"Is this your normal character, or you've gone through a huge change that made you this peculiar, White Tigress?" Jarek grabbed Tinsley's waist and spun her around.

"You are able to think whatever you want," Tinsley replied with a naughty smirk. "Her hand touching his chest.

Jarek almost let out a groan due to her touch which lit a fire in him. "I tend to think that a major incident occurred during those seven years..."

"You were well-informed about my situation." Tinsley scoffed only for Jarek to suddenly pull her waist closer to him, but Tinsley wasn't a newbie in dancing, and she matched his pace perfectly which made him nod at her.

"Except for the one that brought a huge change within those seven years." He replied with a mischievous smirk. "I'd like to know what caused it. Telling my assistant to investigate..."

"NO!!!" Tinsley suddenly yelled, which made the surrounding people take a look at her.

"Oh?" Jarek said lazily.

"Don't check," Tinsley warned, but his lazy expression made her have the belief that he was getting more curious instead. "I mean it's none of your concern." Tinsley snapped at him, which made him arch his brows lazily.

"Oh! Quite interesting."

"Checking out other identities is bad behavior. I'm tired of dancing." Tinsley uttered and began to walk away from him.

Jarek caressed his finger that had just touched and held her. "So amazing! What did you go through that you're hiding up, White Tigress?" Jarek asked himself and watched her walk to drink.

"Jarek's action is puzzling." Tinsley couldn't help but think. And Jarek's actions brought her a massive headache because she doesn't know what he plans.

Tinsley began to think that coming back to Ryle might actually be a bad choice after all the encounters between her and Jarek.

And a bolt of silver ran through her spine when she thought about how Jarek could investigate. Once he investigates her, he'd surely know about the triplet's birth and everything!

The more she thought about it, the more she continued to tremble and left. "Should I get his number?" Tinsley asked herself frantically, but she soon shook her head.

Despite all of that flirting, she didn't get his number. What would she do? What if he really began to investigate her past?

Had it been she got his number she would have warned him not to but now... Tinsley ruffled her head, she suddenly felt tired and doomed.

"Miss, we have arrived." The driver's words made Tinsley stand up languidly. She didn't know that they'd arrived at the villa.

Tinsley suddenly became tired, and it seems like all she could see was Jarek searching through her identity and discovering the triplet's identity. "No..."

"Mom!" The triplet ran into Tinsley's embrace which made her kiss their cheeks while trying to hide the dread in her spine.

"How's today?" Tinsley asked the triplet with feigned cheerful behavior.

"We're fine, Mom." The triplet replied to her.

"Come on. Let's go inside." Tinsley said, and the triplet began to follow her into the villa while clinging onto Tinsley.

"I'll freshen up and come down to play with you guys, okay?" Tinsley uttered and began to leave the living room after the triplet nodded to her.

"Badass." Rory sat up immediately after Tinsley arrived in the room.

"When did you change so, girl?" Rory said to her, which made her sigh.

"I'm not in the mood right now," Tinsley said and began to take off her clothes tiredly.

"What's wrong with your mood? Did someone bully you?" Rory asked in concern.

Yes, Jarek did. "Never mind. It's nothing. Don't ask. I want to be in my space." Tinsley said quickly, which stunned Rory.

Tinsley walked inside to take a shower and after doing so, she went down to play with the triplet, but the triplet seemed to understand that she wasn't in the mood, so they all suggested sleeping because it was late.

And they all decided to sleep with Tinsley and Rory.
