Don't Tell Mum

Chapter 53 Don't Tell Mum

"Hello, Master." A manly voice said in a dim, poor furnished room.

"How's it going?" The person on the other end of the call asked the manly voice.

"I'm prepared." The manly voice said confidently.

"Have you found a chance to infiltrate the team?" The other person asked anxiously, which made the manly voice let out a laugh.

"Yes master, it's successful." The manly voice said confidently.

"When will you be carrying out the operation?"

"Soon Master. The team will be traveling to the countryside where there's no CCTV. It'll be easier to make a move then." He explained.

"Okay. I don't want any slip-ups, do you understand?" The person's voice turned sharp at the end of the conversation.

The man patted his chest confidently which drifted into the other person's ear, "Yes, master. I've never slipped up during a mission, have I?"

"Hm." The person let out a sigh of relief, "And make sure no one's able to trace you, do I make my stand clear?"

"Yes, master." The man replied confidently.

"And make sure to delete our conversation." The person said strictly.

"Yes, master."

"Mom. You're back." Jason, Mason, and Ariel immediately got down from the chair where they were sitting with Jarek and immediately scurried toward Tinsley as soon as she stepped into the mansion.

Tinsley and Jarek's eyes met, but she quickly looked away and bent down to hug the children.

"Have you eaten?" She questioned the Triplet's who was giggling due to the dessert she had just handed them.

"Mom said not to eat from strangers." Jason looked at her straightforwardly. Even though he knew Jarek wasn't a stranger, his current annoyance for Jarek was making him close himself to the man which he was pushing Mason and Ariel to do.

Tinsley sighed and rubbed her forehead tiredly. She bent down and softly began to explain to them, "President Jarek is your daddy, he's not a stranger. Do you understand?" Tinsley questioned, but before the Triplet's could reply...

"Glad you know." Jarek interrupted and strode out of the room feeling a combination of different feelings.

Tinsley sighed and squinted her eyes at the Triplet's. "Did you say anything you shouldn't say to Daddy?"

"I told Daddy that I don't like him, and I'll take Mommy away when I grow up," Jason said confidently which made her lips twitch.

"You don't say that to Daddy." Tinsley admonished Jason softly, but he only looked at her with bright eyes.

"Ok Mom," he replied just for replying sake.

Tinsley sighed upon knowing that Jason was just saying it for saying purpose and only Jarek will be able to change his mind by his actions.

Tinsley stood up and carried Ariel and Mason who were stretching their hands at her demandingly, "You're such a troublesome little adult. Come on, let's eat. And once you're done with that, you'll apologize to Daddy, okay?"

Jason pouted his lips in childish anger upon hearing that he was going to apologize.

"Do you understand?" Tinsley asked, not giving him a chance to refuse.

"Yes, Mom." He finally replied with a remorseful look. Only if he had known, he wouldn't have made President Jarek angry, so he wouldn't need to apologize. Now he had to apologize, which is considered as losing his handsome face.

"Boss, we found out the identity of the hacker." Assistant Jacob said immediately Jarek picked up the call.

Jarek looked at the beautiful compound through the window while his hand lingered on the cigarettes in his pocket but upon remembering his family a few rooms away, he removed his hand from his pocket, "Who's it?" He questioned calmly.

Even assistant Jacob couldn't believe that the result of their search was related to that small boy, "it's a little child and that person is surprisingly your child, boss." He explained which made Jarek arch his brows.

A few seconds later, Jarek nodded. He already had a faint idea of who that little child was. It can only be Jason, that little boy who was smarter than his age.

"Have the results come out?" Jarek finally asked after a few minutes.

"No Boss. It'll be out tomorrow." Assistant Jacob immediately replied, and he cut off the call.

Jarek strode out of the room calmly. He walked toward the Triplet's who was about to sit in the dining room.

Jason frowned when he noticed Jarek which made Jarek's lips curve up.

Without saying anything, Jarek suddenly picked Jason up before he could sit in the dining room and left with him.

Tinsley was shocked by Jarek's actions, but she could only curb her curiosity. Besides, she believed that both of them still needed bonding.

"Let me go. Let me go." Jason struggled repeatedly in Jarek's hold as Jarek walked toward the garden.

"Little smart," Jarek smirked as Jason struggled in Jarek's hold, so Jarek could let him go.

"Let me go. Let me go." Jason continued to implore.

"Call Dad," Jarek demanded.

Jason stopped shouting and pursed his lips stubbornly upon hearing Jarek's words.

"Did you like Daddy?" Jarek asked and placed the little boy to sit on a chair.

"No." He replied straightforwardly.

"Why?"

"Daddy wasn't with Mom," Jason replied which made Jarek narrow his eyes.

"Is that the truth or is it because someone has been trying to hack the J empire?" Jarek asked.

Jason was shocked that his identity had been revealed, but he closed his eyes and pretended not to hear Jarek's words.

"What if I tell Mom?" Jarek finally asked.

"Don't tell Mom. Don't tell Mom." Jason quickly replied which made Jarek squint his eyes.
