Everywhere in the room, the dead bodies of the men lay scattered. Some of the bodies were missing hands, legs, one or two eyes, nose... while the worst ones were the ones where heads were missing. Each and everybody lying there was either covered with gunshots or the knife stabs.

The furniture was messed up with the bloodstains and the dead bodies. The wall color had changed into red because of the blood all around. The floor of the room was also covered with blood, it looked like 'the stream of blood was flowing'[1].

Now there was no need to clarify what the sticky and wet thing was under the girl's feet!

The putrid and the disgusting smell of blood spread throughout the room. it had made difficult for anyone to smell anything else.

It was a horrifying scene that could send a shiver down anyone's body let alone to the little girl.

'Bang...'

'Bang...'

Then suddenly the sound of a gunshot came from downstairs, the girl started trembling, the fear made her heart skip a beat and she could not control her pee.

The faint sound of footsteps were heard coming upstairs. The girl was so shocked that her mind had turned blank. She could not think of what should she do? When she saw some shadows of the men and guns in their hands, she started having goosebumps all over her body.

The shock of the attack was so much for her that she didn't notice that she had peed in her dress.

On hearing the sound of footsteps coming closer to her, she didn't think and ran straight to the corner of the room and hid under the table where a dead body with a missing right eye was lying.

When she noticed the dead body her scream nearly came out of her mouth. Luckily she covered her mouth. Tears started rolling down from her eyes. She tried not to tremble as much as she could. She did not want them to notice her presence. However, the fear was so engulfed in her subconscious mind that she could control herself from trembling.

"Search every place carefully. The secret place would definitely be here. We have to find him. If he leaves from here alive then we all will die." A man commanded.

Soon, the men started searching everywhere. They started to examine every corner of the wall carefully, in search of the secret path. As the man had said, if they couldn't find 'him' then they would all definitely die.

However who was 'him'?

The girl didn't know. She was just praying if that whosoever they were looking for, was found earlier so that they wouldn't come near her.

Unfortunately, the men didn't seem to leave the place without searching it thoroughly. What was more shocking was the men didn't feel disgusted after seeing the dead bodies. As if they weren't affected by such dead bodies lying around. Of course, why would they be affected? They were the ones who had killed them so cruelly.

Time was passing very slowly, with every tick of the clock, the fear started engulfing every cell of her body. She tightly bit her lips to prevent the sound of her cries coming from her.

She didn't want to die!

Although her life was like living hell, still she didn't want to die!!!

Why???

She didn't know...

...

The men swiftly and carefully searched every corner and then move forward. A man's steps were coming towards the table. Seeing this, the girl moved back as much as she could. She didn't want the man to see her. Her heart stopped beating as if she was afraid that her heartbeats could be heard by the man. Her body turned in the alter mode.

Whether she would die by the hand of man or not... no one knows, but one possibility could be that she might be dead because of the extreme level of fear.

The man searched the wall beside the table carefully by knocking into the wall. They could directly dash the wall and could find the secret path from where the man had escaped, but there was a risk in it. There might be some bomb implanted inside the wall which could be accidentally activated due to breaking the wall. As it would be another path to death, they for, sure enough, wouldn't go for that option. Since they had time as they knew that their main target was still hiding in the secret place, they could search the secret path by other methods.

Last night, they had attacked this place to kill their enemy, the man, who had not only ruled their area but also turned their life into a living hell. After careful planning, they decided that it was time to attack on that man. Successfully, they have killed the men here who were securing this place. By the time, they thought that they had won this battle by killing all the men, they have found that the man who was their main target was able to escape from this place safely.

No!!!!

This couldn't happen!!!

They have to kill him by hook or by crook!!!

At that time, they found that one of the subordinates of the man was still alive. They saved him because he was present in this room, so he must know where his boss was?

In the morning after the subordinate woke up, they traded with the subordinate that they would leave him and give him a chance to run away if he would tell them, where had his boss escaped?

In front of death, who would consider to keep this loyalty?

The subordinate instantly let them where his boss was.

Unfortunately, the attackers didn't keep their promises and killed him. After that, they started searching for the secret path as even the subordinate didn't know the exact location of the secret path.

Back to the present searching...

The man didn't find anything from the wall then his sight went towards the table. A thought came in his mind and then he called out for his fellow member "Hey, come here and help me to remove this table. I think under this table we could find the secret place."

When the girl heard him, she immediately closed her eyes as she felt she could not delay her death now!

Even if they wouldn't kill her, but there was no guarantee that they wouldn't torture her like she was used to...

Whatever, be the scenario, she saw the worst life ahead of her ...

His fellow members immediately came and started moving the table together!

[1] the stream of blood was flowing' () means blood flow everywhere like a river.
