

Triplets On SM 1601

Chapter 1601-'The hidden passage has been blown up?!' Ward's face clouded over immediately. He grabbed the subordinate's collar and questioned angrily, "What did you say? Why was the hidden passage discovered?"

The subordinate's face turned pale in fright. He stammered and couldn't answer Ward's question, "It..."

The blast was sudden. The people in the base had just gone there. The subordinate hadn't gotten any news yet.

Thus, the subordinate knew nothing about it.

At that time, Selseey arrived hotfoot.

As soon as Ward saw Selseey, Ward let go of the terrified subordinate and slapped Selseey.

Before Selseey said something, he was woozy from this fierce slap.

Selseey stood there blankly and even didn't have the time to shut his mouth.

Ward lashed out angrily, "Rubbish! The hidden passage is so important to us!

How can you fail to defend it?"

Selseey came to his sense and explained subconsciously, " Mr. Lopez, I..."

But Ward didn't give Selseey any chance to explain.

“You must know how important the hidden passage is for the union.” Ward gritted his teeth with a horrible expression on his face. Under the lights, the scar on his face was extremely fiendish.

When the union went to the island to build the research base, their aim was to develop illegal drugs. The hidden passage was used to deliver the drugs secretly.

Of course, Selseey knew about it clearly.

Thus, Selseey said, “Mr. Lopez, don’t worry. I will find out the manipulator as soon as possible!”

“As soon as possible?” Ward had the impulse to slap Selseey again.

‘Rubbish!

‘He’s a thorough rubbish!

‘It’s such a severe accident, but he just paltered with me like that!’ Ward took a deep breath to suppress his anger and added.” Recently, we will have a deal of the drugs. The hidden passage has been blown up, so the deal will be delayed.”

When Selseey heard that, his expression changed.

He didn’t think of it until Ward mentioned it.

‘I’m screwed!’ Ward added. “As long as the deal is delayed, the union will lose a lot of money and explode with rage. At that time, no one will escape the punishment.”

When Ward said so, he stared at Selseey with a sinister and malicious gaze.

The union sent him here to handle the recent riot and guarantee the deal to go on smoothly.

However, because of the good-for-nothing Selseey, he might be unable to complete the tasks and would be punished.

Thinking of that, Ward became more furious.

From Ward's expression, Selseey knew that Ward wanted him to take the whole responsibility for the accident.

Thinking of how the union punished people who made mistakes, Selseey trembled in fright.

No way!

'I can't take the whole responsibility.' Selseey subconsciously wanted to shift responsibility, but Ward guessed Selseey's thoughts and interrupted him," After you deal with the accident, go to the headquarters to take the punishment."

Ward glared at Selseey and didn't give him any chance to refuse.

Ward could only agree reluctantly. "OK."

"The priority is to repair the passage as soon as possible to reduce the union's loss."

Ward turned to look at the burning port and narrowed his eyes slowly.

'I won't let the manipulator off!' Because of the blast, during the following days, the base mobilized a great deal of personnel to repair the passage and didn't have the time to deal with protesters

Chapter 1602-Early the next morning.

Sean was gradually recovering, so Molly took him out of the underground lab for a walk.

The moment they returned to the house after the walk, Tony came. "Sir, Madam." Sean cast a glance at Tony and asked, "How about our plan?"

"Everything is going smoothly. The port is almost ruined. Although the base has dispatched many people to repair it, they can't restore it within a few days," Tony said.

At Tony's report, Sean gave a sneer. "Ward must be hopping mad since the hidden passage was destroyed."

"He deserves it," Tony snorted. "I still feel the punishment is lenient. He'd better be pissed off and then die."

Hearing Tony's words, Molly couldn't help laughing. "Won't it be lenient to him if he dies just due to rage?"

After thinking for a while, Tony considered her words reasonable. "Yes, Madam.

You're right."

"What's the situation outside now?" Sean queried.

"The base is busy repairing the port, so it won't make trouble for people temporarily," Tony answered.

"Now you can rest easy." Sean took Molly's hand and stared fixedly at her.

"Yeah." Molly nodded.

She was so worried last night that she couldn't even fall asleep.

She was afraid that someone would die, and then she would be a sinner. As Sean was with her yesterday, he knew her worry and sleeplessness.

He squeezed her hand and asked softly, "How about having a sleep?"

Molly shook her head.

Molly was actually tired out, but still refused to sleep, about which Sean was slightly anxious.

He turned his head and gave Tony a meaningful look.

Tony understood Sean's intention and said, "Sir, Madam, I have some other work to handle. Gotta go, see you."

Without getting Molly's reply, Tony left.

Molly frowned slightly. "Why does he run so fast? Is there something very important?"

"Let him go." Sean hugged her, kissed her forehead, and asked again, "How about having a sleep?"

Molly still shook her head.

Sean blinked as he came up with a way to let Molly sleep.

He kissed her forehead, then down from her eyes, nose, lips finally to her sexy collarbone.

Everywhere he had kissed got itchy. Molly breathed rapidly with her body going limp.

Sean looked up at her and asked again, "How about having a sleep?"

'This is the third time he has asked me this question!

"He kisses me just to send me to sleep.' Molly was amused at the thought of it. "If I don't sleep, you'll keep kissing me, won't you?"

"No." Sean gave a peck on her lips and replied, "I'll do something before I put you to sleep."

His voice was low, sounding charming and pleasant.

God! He had been with her for so long, but she was still allured by him easily.

Blushing, Molly put her hands on his chest to keep a distance from him. "Calm down. You haven't fully recovered and should rest."

"But you don't sleep." As Sean licked her earlobe fondly, Molly got an ecstatic shock.

She shrank her neck and had to agree. "Well, I'll go to sleep immediately."

At her words, Sean showed a satisfied smile. He kissed her forehead and responded, "Okay. Good girl."

Chapter 1603-Molly woke up at noon the following day.

She learned that Sean was in the underground research room, so after a quick lunch, she made her way to the basement.

Sean was on a video call. Noting her arrival, he waved her over.

"Come over. It's the kids and Mr. Ballard."

Delighted, Molly hurried over. Her eyes warmed at the sight of the three adorable kids on the screen. The three children's faces lit up with excitement when they saw their mother, and they shouted in unison, "Mommy!"

"Have you arrived?" Molly asked, her voice cracking with emotion.

She had been worried about the children and Mr. Ballard for the past two days, and seeing them safe filled her with relief.

She was overjoyed.

"We're getting ready to board the plane."

The kids replied, easing Molly's concerns even further.

Thank God, they were finally safe.

With a serious expression, she reminded them. "After going back, stay with your uncles. Don't be naughty or mischievous, alright?"

She blathered on and on.

On the other end of the phone, the children were not annoyed. On the contrary, they listened carefully with their eyes fixed on her.

"Are we clear?" Molly asked in the end.

"Loud and clear!" the three little ones responded in unison.

A warm smile spread across Molly's face as she gazed at them tenderly. "Your dad and I will go back soon."

"We'll wait for you at home."

"Yeah."

They were so engrossed in their conversation that they would have continued talking if it weren't for their flight. Reluctantly, they ended the video call.

Molly gazed at her darkened phone screen. The smile on her face slowly faded and was replaced by a look of sadness.

She longed to hug the little ones.

Seeing her distress, Sean pulled her into his arms and whispered words of comfort. "Once we're finished here, I'll take you back to them."

Molly looked up at him.

Their eyes met.

"It won't be long," Sean promised as he kissed her forehead.

It was her choice to stay, so she didn't want to rush him.

There were still things that needed to be taken care of before they could leave with peace of mind.

She frowned slightly and asked, "What's happening at the base?"

After the explosion the night before, there must still be a lot of work to do.

“They’re trying to repair the port.”

Sean said with a cold smile, “But it’s unlikely they’ll succeed.”

“Are you sure?” Molly asked, concern etched on her face.

It was not that she didn’t believe him, but those at the base were no ordinary people.

“Yeah. The damage is too severe.”

It would take at least six months to fully repair it.

He naturally would not give the base and the Martial Art Union that much time.

Soon, the entire base would be destroyed.

Sean’s eyes glinted with coldness.

“That’s good.”

Molly heaved a sigh of relief and said, “They won’t have time to deal with us.”

Sean nodded but changed the topic. “By the way, Mr. Shepard sent a message this morning. The base was supposed to ship a batch of goods, but it has been delayed because of this.”

“Ward must be hopping mad.”

Chapter 1604-‘Goods?’ Molly frowned. “Are they the drugs developed by the base?”

Other than that, she really couldn't think of any other goods that the base could produce.

"Yeah." Sean nodded his head. "Our people are trying to check those goods."

He narrowed his eyes coldly and continued, "I've been wanting to investigate No.1 to No. 5 research labs. This is a good opportunity."

Molly nodded approvingly. "It will be great if we can take advantage of it to investigate those drugs and other undeveloped drugs in the base together."

"We will." Sean smiled at her, "Trust me, okay?"

"Of course, I trust you."

Molly raised her hand and caressed his cheek, sighing, "I just hope you won't work too hard. You need to recuperate first."

When the Venomous Insect was transferred out of Sean's body, he was very weak.

Although Sean had been resting these days, the damage was serious. If he wanted to recover, it would take some time.

So his health was more important than dealing with the base.

Sean held Molly's hand, lowered his head, and kissed the back of her hand. "I know. I'll rest well. These things have been left to Tony and the others. I'm only responsible for planning."

At that, Molly chuckled, "Alright, alright, so Mr. Mastermind, can I put you on an IV now?"

“Sure.”

Sean obediently held out his hand.

Molly was amused. She turned around to get the medicine and put him on a drip before going next door to the research lab.

Logan and Edmund were there.

The two men were standing in front of the lab table in their white coats, their backs to the door. Molly did not know what they were studying. They were so serious that they didn't even notice her coming in.

So, she went over to them.

Edmund was startled by the head suddenly popping up from the side, and when he realized it was Molly, he patted his chest and complained, “Why did you walk without a sound? You almost scared me to death!”

Molly looked at him and said coolly, “How could someone as timid as you become a doctor?”

Seeing the obvious contempt in her eyes, Edmund was furious. He crossed his arms and said angrily, “You frightened me by appearing out of nowhere, okay?”

“Alright, I'm just kidding with you.” Molly patted his shoulder perfunctorily, her attention drawn to the bottle in Logan's hand.

“Don't patronize me!” Edmund pouted.

Inside the bottle was the Venomous Insect, the one from Kara's body.

It was red.

And it was wriggling, looking disgusting.

With a churning stomach, Molly frowned, turned her head to Logan, and asked, "Have you found anything?"

Edmund, who was not hiding his disgust, shook his head. "Why are you all interested in such creepy insects?"

Just looking at it like this made his scalp tingle.

Compared to Edmund, Logan was very calm. He looked at Molly and replied, "Yes."

When Molly heard this, she was immediately excited and asked, "What did you find out?"

She knew Logan would not disappoint her.

"After these few days of observation, we found that this Venomous Insect seemed to have been raised by potions."

"Potions? Raised?"

Molly's eyebrows were knitted again. "Why do you say that?"

"Because no matter what we fed them before, they didn't eat them, while inside the potions, they are particularly active."

Chapter 1605-What? The insect is raised by potions?' Molly frowned and stepped forward to check the insect, finding that just as Logan said, the insect was particularly active in the potion.

“It seems that Sean has guessed right. People are very likely to nurture Venomous Insects at the base,” Molly said, grimfaced.

Staring at the insect, she gave a sigh. “I hope there will be no accidents.”

“Yes.” Logan nodded. “Once an insect enters a human body, controlling it will be very difficult, and it might cause untold harm to a man.”

Edmund gave a cold shudder and said in a quivering voice, “I’ll freak out if the damn insect goes into my body!”

The more Edmund thought about it, the more frightened he felt!

Logan cast a glance at him. “The more afraid a person is of the insect, the more likely the insect will attack him.”

Logan and Molly exchanged glances.

Molly understood his intention, gave a slight cough, and uttered, “Logan is right.

Edmund, be careful.”

“Well, stop talking!” Terrified, Edmund got goose bumps.

He glared at them, unhappy. “Are you both devils?”

‘They know I fear the insect, but they still scare me!

‘What friends I have!’ Hearing Edmund’s complaint, Molly and Logan burst out laughing, and the atmosphere became relaxed.

But soon, Molly stopped laughing and said to Edmund seriously, "I know you're terrified, but this matter is very serious."

Edmund nodded. "I know. So... what can I do?"

"If the base really breeds insects, we have no way to stop it." Molly looked at Logan, who replied, "The most serious thing is that apart from Sean and Kara, we have no idea whether anyone else has the insect in the body."

"That's exactly what I worry about." Molly nodded. "What we can do now is develop some drugs that can prevent the insect from injuring people."

She smiled at Edmund. "I need your help."

"No problem. Just tell me what I should do." Edmund agreed without any hesitation.

As Edmund agreed so readily, Molly's smile deepened.

She walked to the file cabinet, took out a folder, and passed it to Logan and Edmund.

"This includes the prescriptions provided by Mr. Ballard when he left," Molly uttered.

Logan and Edmund began reading them.

Many of the prescriptions were about how to combat the Venomous Insect, which were immensely useful for the drug development.

"Mr. Ballard is totally reliable at a critical juncture," Edmund said.

Molly nodded with a smile and answered, "Certainly! My teacher is definitely the steadiest hand."

She added, "No matter whether the base fosters insects, we should take precautions, though I hope the drugs won't come in handy."

"We hope so, too." Logan and Edmund looked at each other, both of whom didn't utter any other words. Then they devoted themselves to developing the drugs.

At the sight of it, Molly felt warm.

Without them, she couldn't have handled so many things.

She took a deep breath and joined them in the drug development.

They were so busy and absorbed that no one realized it was time for dinner. Not until Edmund's stomach growled did they stop working.

Chapter 1606-It was quiet in the lab. The rumbling of Edmund's stomach was particularly clear.

Molly teased, "Your stomach is even more accurate than the alarm clock." "I always eat on time." Edmund had an awkward smile.

"Let's go have dinner first." Then Molly turned around and got out of the lab.

She had been so busy all afternoon that she hadn't gone to check on Sean.

Seeing Molly coming, Sean frowned and asked in a deep voice, "I haven't seen you all afternoon. Have you been busy? If Molly first felt his pulse and then replied softly, "We found the Venomous Insect particularly active in the potion, and I remembered your earlier suspicion.

"In case anyone gets the Venomous Insect, we're going to develop some medicine in advance."

That was what she'd been working on the whole afternoon.

Sean took her hand and said, "Don't work too hard."

"It's okay." Molly responded, "I'm a doctor. It's my job."

"But I'm worried you'll be too tired." Sean lifted his hand, pinched her nose, and said in a soft voice, "Take a break when you're too busy."

Molly smiled, "OK. Don't worry."

At that moment, Tony came in with dinner. "Sir, Mrs.

Anderson, here's dinner."

He placed the food on the table and removed the lid from the soup jar.

A smell of herbs wafted out.

This was specially cooked for Sean in order to get him to recover soon.

As soon as the lid was removed, Molly felt like throwing up.

She quickly covered her mouth and resisted the urge to vomit.

Seeing that Molly looked uncomfortable, Sean asked with concern, "Are you OK?"

Molly put her hand down and replied with a smile, "I'm fine. Maybe I've been smelling the medicine the whole afternoon, so the smell of herbs makes me sick."

Sean immediately gave Tony a look, signaling him to put the lid on the jar.

Tony immediately put the lid on the jar.

"Maybe you're too hungry." Sean gave a serious expression. "It's not good to not eat on time. You're hurting your stomach. If "I see. I'll eat on time from now on." Molly responded.

"But my stomach should be fine..."

Suddenly, something occurred to her and her face tensed up.

Her period seemed to be delayed by half a month.

She was so busy these days that she had forgotten about it. Suddenly, she remembered it.

Am I...? She subconsciously glanced at Sean and compressed her lips. 'It can't be...' "Let's eat," Sean demanded.

Molly hurriedly collected herself and responded, "OK." Then she and Sean ate dinner.

She didn't mention her delayed period to Sean.

She wasn't sure, so she didn't want to worry him.

After dinner, Molly went back to the lab.

She went straight to Logan and said in a low voice, "Logan, please help me draw my blood."

“Your blood?”

Logan looked at her and gave her a worried look. Then he asked, “Are you okay?”

Molly nodded. “I’m fine. I need the blood to do something.”

Sensing that Molly didn’t want to tell him, Logan didn’t ask.”

OK. Just a minute.”

After Logan drew her blood, Molly took the blood sample to be tested.

The results soon came out.

When she saw the test results, she had a wry smile.

‘I’m really pregnant! No wonder I threw up so terribly last time.’

Chapter 1607-Molly stared at the result.

It would have deserved celebration if she hadn’t been busy dealing with the venomous insect.

But now, it was a bittersweet moment for her.

She was happy that she and Sean had another baby.

She was anxious that the time was not suitable for pregnancy. What if something wrong happened to her baby?

She didn't dare to think deeply.

Well, take things as they come.

She let out a long sigh of relief, calmed down, and walked out of the research lab.

No matter what happened, Sean had the right to know about her pregnancy.

Leaning against the bed, Sean was typing quickly on the laptop.

Although he hadn't fully recovered, he didn't delay any work.

"Sean." Hearing Molly's voice, he turned his head subconsciously and saw Molly smiling at him sweetly.

His expression softened instantly.

He closed the laptop and smiled. "Have you finished your work?"

Molly walked to him step by step, with her hands behind her back. She shook her head with a smile, not uttering a word.

Preoccupied with the insects, she rarely smiled these days.

So, Sean was very curious about why she became delighted. "What makes you so happy?"

"Er..." Molly tilted her head to look at him. "Take a guess."

"Do you have a discovery about the insect?"

“No!”

“Have you developed the antidote?”

“No!”

Sean failed to make the right guess several times.

Ultimately, he raised his eyebrows and queried resignedly, “How about just telling me?”

Otherwise, he couldn’t figure out the reason.

“Look at it!” Molly agreed and stretched out her hand.

Sean lowered his eyes and saw the paper in her hand.

“What’s this?” He took the paper and frowned. It was a blood test report.

Although he knew every word on the report, he couldn’t understand it at all since he was not a doctor.

Just when he was about to ask Molly, Logan came.

“Molly, are you alright?” Molly had asked Logan to help draw blood, who was slightly worried and followed her here.

“I’m alright.” Molly smiled at him.

Noticing Sean’s furrowed brows, Logan asked with confusion, “What’s wrong?”

Sean looked bewildered.

“I can’t understand the report,” Sean said to Molly.

Hearing it, Logan took a glance at the report in Sean’s hand and asked in surprise, “Molly, isn’t this your blood test report?”

“May I take a look at it?” Then he asked Sean, who did not refuse and handed him the report.

Logan took it and read it for a while. When he saw the HCG value on it, he smiled. “Congratulations! This is a good thing!” He said while looking at Sean, who looked more bewildered. “Why congratulations?”

At Sean’s words, Logan turned to look at Molly with a questioning expression— Didn’t you tell him?

Molly shrugged her shoulders and shook her head.

It turned out to be so.

No wonder Sean was bewildered.

Logan said to Sean kindly, “You are going to have another baby.”

The news was astonishing!

Sean got astounded the moment he heard it.

‘I... I’m going to have another baby?’

Did I mishear?' After quite a while, Sean slowly came back to his senses. He stared at Molly in astonishment, with his eyes widening. "Is that so?"

Chapter 1608-Molly smiled brightly, "It's true."

Sean was so surprised to get the affirmative answer that he pulled her over and hugged her.

Logan saw this scene, feeling happy for them. He smiled and sensibly turned around to go out.

When he walked out, he suddenly missed Lesley.

If one day Lesley was pregnant, he would be more excited than Sean.

Imagining that beautiful scene, Logan revealed a smile. The most important thing now was to hurry up and take care of the things here so that he could go back and reunite with Lesley.

So, he quickly went back to the research lab and continued the development of the drug.

Molly quietly leaned on Sean's chest with a sweet smile, her eyes gentle.

After a long time, Sean slowly said, "So you threw up so much that day because..."

Molly interrupted him, "Yeah, I thought it was because the Venomous Insect was disgusting, and I didn't realize I was pregnant."

With that, she raised her hand to her flat belly.

Sean let go of her, lowered his head, and looked at her belly. He reached out to touch it but did not dare.

He was afraid of hurting their baby.

When Molly was pregnant with the three little ones and gave birth to them, Sean was not by her side.

This had always been a regret in his heart.

Now, she was pregnant again.

Sean was delighted and a little overwhelmed.

Seeing him reach out and retract his hand several times with a hesitant and cautious look, Molly wanted to laugh.

She pulled his hand over and pressed it against her belly.

“It’s not that fragile. You don’t have to worry.” Molly gazed at him with amusement.

‘What a lovely fool!’ Sean gave her a look before gently stroking her belly. He was excited at the thought that a new life would be born.

“This little guy really knows how to pick the time,” he teased with a smile.

Molly laughed, “Indeed. Everything is in chaos now...”

Sean heard the worry in her words and once again held her close, his voice soft.

“It’s okay. I’ll protect you guys and this little one.”

Since they received this gift at this time, he would protect it no matter what.

Hearing this, Molly instantly put her mind at ease.

Yes, with Sean around, it would be fine.

“OK,” she answered gently.

The two embraced each other quietly for a while.

Sean suddenly thought of something, looked down at the person in his arms, and asked, “How old is it?”

He almost forgot to ask this because of joy.

Molly smiled, “Just over a month. It’s still early.”

“Not another three, right?”

‘Three?’ Molly frowned as she shook her head. “I hope not. It’s hard to deliver triplets.

One is good.”

When she thought about how tired she was when she was pregnant with the three kids, she really didn’t want to go through it again.

Sean saw how reluctant Molly was, so he could imagine she had a hard time back then. He felt sad and guilty.

He lowered his head, kissed her brow, and said warmly, “Yeah, one is enough. I don’t want you to be too tired.”

“We’ll know it soon anyway.” Molly stroked her belly again.

Sean frowned. “I wonder if it’s a boy or a girl. It will be nice if it is a girl.”

There were already two boys and a girl in the family, so Sean wanted another daughter.

Chapter 1609-Since Molly was pregnant, Sean decided to end the plan on the island quickly and leave the island soon, so he could be relieved.

Later in the evening, he called Tony.

“Sir, what can I do for you?”

Tony looked at Sean with confusion and wondered what Sean was calling him for.

Sean was silent for a moment. Then he looked up at Tony and said in a solemn voice, “Speed up our plan. I don’t want to spend too much time on this island.”

Tony was dumbfounded. He asked, “Sir, why do you suddenly want to speed up the plan?”

Everything was being carried out smoothly and according to schedule.

Tony couldn’t understand why Sean wanted to finish their mission as soon as possible.

“Molly misses the kids.”

Sean made up an excuse. He didn’t tell Tony that Molly was pregnant.

Tony didn’t suspect it.

After thinking about it, Tony said with hesitance, "Sir, I can understand Mrs.

Anderson missing the kids, but the situation is a little complicated." "What?" Sean raised his eyebrows.

"There are too many people on the island. They're all innocent civilians. And the base has controlled a lot of doctors. We can't rush." Tony showed a worried look.

Sean was worried about that, too, but he couldn't wait.

He was afraid that if they stayed on the island too long, Molly and the baby would be in danger.

After a few seconds of silence, Sean said, "Actually, the whole thing isn't that difficult."

Tony gave an expectant look and asked, "Sir, what do you have in mind?"

Sean narrowed his eyes and said, "If we take control of the top management of the base, the base will be out of control. They'll get loose and then we can take them down in one fell swoop." His eyes were fierce and his tone was cold.

He raised his eyes to Tony and ordered, "Gather the others."

Tony nodded hastily. "Yes!" Then he hurried away.

In the evening, Molly came out of the lab and went to the consulting room.

When she found that Sean was not in the room, she wondered, 'Where did he go?' Just then, Edmund passed by the door. Seeing Molly, he said, ' Mr. Anderson has gone upstairs.'

Molly turned around and heard Edmund add, "Mr. Anderson and Tony went upstairs together. They must be up to something. They both look very serious."

When Edmund saw Sean and Tony, he had just come out of the bathroom. He wanted to say hello to them, but just as he raised his hand, the two walked right past him, as if they hadn't even seen him.

"OK. Thank you." Molly smiled at him and went upstairs.

Meanwhile, in the second floor study, everyone was there, except Megrez and Alioth, who had escorted the kids away earlier.

Blackrose and the other four other fighters were also there. They all looked very serious.

It was silent and tense in the study.

Suddenly, the door to the study was pushed open.

Everyone looked at the door.

It was Molly.

When she pushed the door open, she was stunned by everyone's stare.

She was about to call 'Sean', but the word was choked back.

'What's going on here? Why is everyone here?'

Before she could ask, a girl rushed toward her and threw her into a hug.

Then Molly heard a familiar voice.

“Mrs. Anderson, I’ve missed you so much!”

Chapter 1610-It was Merak!

It was only after being hugged by her that Molly came back to her senses and met the sparkling eyes of the young girl.

She laughed, “Long time no see.”

Then, her gaze swept over the other people in the room, finally settling on Merak. “When did you guys arrive?”

After they separated last time, Merak followed Chester back to the Grandset.

It had been a long time since they last met.

“We arrived a few days ago, and we’ve been busy with our task,” Merak replied with a smiling face.

Upon hearing this, Molly was slightly surprised. It turned out that Sean had brought them to the island a long time ago, but they hadn’t shown up until now.

“Madam, do you miss me?” Merak blinked her eyes, staring expectantly at her.

Molly smiled and patted her head. “Of course I do. You have worked hard during this period of time.”

With this satisfying answer, Merak immediately smiled brightly. She shook her head and said, “Not at all.”

With the praise from Molly, her hard work was worth it, no matter how difficult it had been.

Molly looked at Merak with gentle eyes.

She had always regarded this girl as her own younger sister.

After chatting with Merak for a while, Molly turned to look at the others.

“Madam.” Others present respectfully greeted her at the same time.

Molly nodded at them with a smile before looking at Sean. “I will leave you to talk.”

Judging from the current situation, Molly guessed they must have something important to discuss, and it wasn't appropriate for her to stay here.

Just as she was about to turn around, Sean said, “It's okay. You can also listen to our discussion.”

Hearing this, Molly looked at him with an inquiring expression.

Sean smiled, “Come over here.”

Since he allowed her to stay, Molly didn't hesitate and sat down beside him.

“Are you tired?” Sean held her tightly around the waist.

Seeing this, other people present tactfully lowered their heads.

“Not at all.”

With so many people around, Molly felt a tinge of embarrassment as Sean displayed such intimate behavior.

When Sean noticed her uneasiness, his smile deepened.

They are like my family members, so there is no need for formalities.”

Molly was left speechless. With a sensitive nature, she felt embarrassed to display affection in public with Sean.

However, instead of revealing her true emotions, she reminded him, “Please go ahead with your own business and don’t mind me being here.”

Sean nodded slightly. Putting on a serious look, he returned to his usual cold demeanor and said, “Tony should have told you about it, right?”

“Yes,” everyone responded in unison.

He nodded. “Since we need to accelerate our actions, everyone’s tasks will be changed.”

“Master, we will follow your arrangements,” Blackrose expressed the opinions of everyone.

Looking at her, Sean narrowed his eyes and said, “You will be responsible for dealing with Ward and Selseey, and the other four will be on standby.”

Blackrose frowned. “Master, are you worried about something?”

Although she was happy that Master trusted her so much by arranging such an important task, she still felt that something was wrong.

Sean calmly explained, "It's not that I'm worried, but that Ward came here quietly and may have hidden some manpower, so we need to be well-prepared." "Master, you indeed have a thorough consideration."

Blackrose felt it made sense and nodded. "OK. I'll try my best to deal with the two of them."

After arranging the tasks of his five top experts, Sean looked at Merak. "You'll continue to provide remote support, and if necessary, please take action to remove any individuals who pose a threat."
