

140 CHAPTER 140

Niyol's POV 1

"So is Koko's mother really leaving?"

My beta and I were in my office looking through some budget plans for the palace, when he asked that question and I responded positive to it and immediately both of us sighed with relief.

"Finally! I thought she would never leave.."

"Chester, she is still my mother-in-law, don't forget that."

"She might be your mother-in-law, but no offense to you, that woman has no sort of class. I'm quite surprised that she was able to raise someone like Koko, but that explains why they are not close..."

I did not want to admit it to my mate, but I was more fed up of her mother than she even was, although that did not change the fact that she was still her mother and there was no way I could throw her out, even though it seemed like she was becoming more and more unbearable everyday.

Whenever she came to a dining table, I was sure everything would be messed up. She would eat and drink as if that was her last day on earth, and just yesterday alone, the kind of shopping she went could have fed an entire family for a whole month.

Everything she did was without care or consideration and it was really getting on my nerves, tolerating her attitude.

I wanted to see how their talk went, so I planted a camera in the garden yesterday, however I did not check it, so I decided to just do so now.

It had already been brought to my desk since yesterday.

"This is the footage from the camera that was planted in the garden."

As I slotted in the USB and connected it to the laptop, what I saw and heard was like a dream to me.

"Chester, please tell me that this is a joke.."

"Niyol, I'm afraid, it's not.."

Immediately, I got up to my feet and started running like I was being chased by a thousand beasts. After everything I did for that woman, she had actually been trying to convince my mates to go back to that bastard that treated her like trash.

And not only that, she even went as far as encouraging my mate to also get rid of our pup, her grand child.

I should have listened to my mate and never given her a chance to come into our lives, there were some people that could never and would never change no matter what happens to them and unfortunately my mate's mother was one of those people.

By the time I got to the gate, I was informed by the guards that the car had already left some minutes ago.

There was no time to waste, I knew all the emergency protocols would be taken care of by Chester without me needing to say anything, so I started running at full speed.

Now that I had marked her, our bond was stronger than it had ever been before, which meant that I would be able to sense her and mine link her from any direction and almost any distance at all.

I knew they would be heading to the border, so I ran towards that direction, following a shortcut through the bushy path. I tried to connect with my mate, but she was not responding.

What had they done to her?

I immediately increased my pace until I could hear my heart pounding in my ears. My bones, along with every single fibre of my muscles were begging me to stop.

But I stretched myself until finally when I looked across the road, a few distance away I felt my mate's presence in a black car that was parked on one side of the road.

I could feel it, she was in that black car, the guards had also confirmed that the car that took her was black.

I jumped on top of the rooftop, as I got to the car that just started moving, so I would not be distracted by traffic or get into an accident in my rush.

This higher ground also gave me the leverage to jump on the roof of the car.

As soon as I jumped on the car, the driver started swerving around trying to throw me off, but I held on tightly, my claws sinking into the roof of the car and I could hear them screaming from inside.

I could not hear the voice of my mate in the car, even though her smell was evident and in that moment of destruction, I was imagining the worst.

Before I could really think of anything, the car swerved onto a lamppost, and it took me all the strength I had as an alpha not to fall off.

My heart sank into my stomach. This was not what I planned.

I climbed down to check on my mate, my heart was pounding so much that I thought I was going crazy, but before I could even get down from the car, I saw my mate's mom rushing out, she was bleeding from a few cuts she had sustained.

She didn't even bother to check if her daughter was still alive or dead, and what happened next came faster than a flash of lightning.

As she was running without looking back, a moving car at top speed suddenly crashed her, sending her three blocks away. But I did not have any time to react to that as I was trying to save my mate. I pulled out the door of the car

And there was my mate, shoved to the side by the airbag which cushioned up the intensity of the crash. I pushed aside the airbag and pulled her out.

Immediately, I got a cab, I did not need to introduce myself before getting recognized. I told the driver to take us to the nearest hospital, as there was no time to take her to the Royal clinic.

All the way to the clinic, I held her close to myself checking if there was any injury on her body.

As I was pulling her out, I noticed there was someone else in the car that had ginger hair, so I got an ambulance to save his life and that was when they checked and found out he was actually wearing a wig.

I saw that the person was actually Gad, the bastard had tried to steal my mate from me the second time. If I knew it was him from the start, I would have left him to die in the car immediately.

But that was not something I had to worry about, because he had also lost a lot of blood since he was sitting at the front seat before the accident. As I stood at his bedside, the only regret I had was not being able to kill him myself.

"What did... you do to my mate?"

I was about walking away when he said that and then I turned and faced him, what did I do?

"You stole her from me! I'm the only man she ever loved!"

Even as he was at the door of death, he was still delusional, I turned my back on him and said.

"You threw a diamond and I found her, so you have no right to call her yours again..."

Then I left to check up on my mate.

Comment ⁰

Leave the first comment for this chapter.

Vote

Send Gift

Swipe left to continue >