297 DEEPER SECRETS TWENTY YEARS AGO

Once Jasmine had gone Urma breathed a sigh of relief and hurried back into her room. 1

Ned was taken aback by Her abrupt burst in the room.

"Is everything alright?" He asked.

She nodded. "Yes it is. Get on with your work I need to check for something."

And then he nodded and went back to fishing through the medicine recipes.

She walked to the door that led into her bathing chamber and closed it shut behind her before locking it up.

Then she picked up a stool and climbed it reaching for the roof.

She searched through the roof and began to rummage hastily.

At first she began to panic that she could not find what she was looking for.

She began to sweat and her entire being began to shake with terror.

And then finally it tumbled down from the roof and landed on the floor.

She went down from the stool and picked it up and began to look through.

It was a large brown file and it was old and intertwined with a brown wool.

She unwound it and began to look through it.

There were papers and writings and letters that were extremely old.

Along with it, there ways some old antiques.

She picked up one of the letters and looked through it.

It was a letter from Bale to her, precisely almost twenty years ago.

Before Jasmine had been born.

As she reflected through the papers, she began to shake just like the first time she had read it.

And she had almost gone insane.

She had gone to you him and he had been panting all around, sweating. 1

She hurried into his bed chamber and closed the door quietly behind her.

Then Bale had still been very young. Had not married Luna Maria yet.

None of the chaos that had befallen the moonlight pack had occurred.

His parents had recently only died.

"What was that you wrote for me Bale?"

Urma asked.

Bale was walking around, panicking and breathing so hard.

"The truth Urma." He said. "You are the only one person I can trust. I do not trust anyone."

"Calm down Bale." She said gently. "Calm down."

"You read the letters didn't you?" He asked her.

"I did." She nodded. "Is it true? Is he back?"

"Yes." Bale said.

Urma put her hand over her face.

"Your parents had insisted that he will no longer return." She said. "Especially after what he did."

"It is not even about what he did Urma. If is not even about that anymore." He responded. "It is about what he wants to do."

"He has taken someone." Bale said. "Some dear to me and I will not see her fall with him. I will not have her heartbroken the same way he broke us all."

"He is your flesh and blood." Urma chided.

"Because he is my twin and identical brother does not mean we are the same." 2

He shot back. "You raised the both is us together. You of all people should know this."

Urma swallowed heavily.

"What do you want me to do then?" She asked.

"I want to stop him." He said. "Stop him before he ruins us all and leads us to damnation along with him."

Urma swallowed. "And the woman."

"I want him fat from her. I have no idea how he found her. Declan has always had the nose to smell good things from afar." Bale said. "And that is the problem."

"So where is she?" Urma asked.

"I will bring her here and hide her from him and I will face him myself." Bale said.

Urma grabbed his arm.

"You need to be careful with him." Urma said.

"That is why I came to see you first." Bale said. "He keeps on getting away with these things. I need to put a stop to it."

Urma sighed. "What do you want?"

"I want to know how to kill him and send him away from our lives forever." Bale said.

"That is dangerous magic." Urma informed him.

"I have no choice. He has already dabbled in black magic. How do I protect myself?" He asked.

"Report to the council. They will do something." She advised him.

"What are they going to do? Delay him until he kills us?" Bale asked and shook his head. "No j am going to handle this myself. And my own way. And it is either you help me or I leave. Either ways I would do it, with or without your help."

Urma dropped the letter back into the file.

Jasmine could never know.

She would be furious if she ever found out, but she was doing it to protect her. 1

It was for her own good.

There were things that were dangerous.

Secrets that were never supposed to see the light of the day.

She looked at another paper.

It was a letter that Jasmine's mother Red had written for her own daughter.

She could never ever give any of this to Jasmine.

Staying in the dark was the best solution she had.

Moreover she had promised Bale that she would never let her know.

She picked up the file and dropped it in a metallic box.

And then she opened her hands and fire emerged.

And then she threw the fire into the metallic pot and it burned instantly

She watched as the fire cackled and every single thing in it burned.

Perhaps Jasmine would never forgive her.

But this was the past.

When Jasmine had said that she would bring eternal doom.

She had shaken in terror.

Had Bale been so deranged that he has almost told her the truth?

Thank the heavens that Xaden had killed hik at the exact moment or everything would have been exposed.

Once Jasmine was out of the moonlight pack, she would be able to start her life afresh . 1

She felt her palm burning and she saw where she had done the blood oath.

It was burning mark that made sure she concealed whatever secret she had kept.

She wondered if Bale's own mark had almost killed him.

Even if she wanted to tell Jasmine, she never would be able to.

She was compelled to keep her promise and so would it remain.

She sighed and when the fire was completely gone, she used her magic to wipe away the burned ashes.

"Urma." She heard Ned call. "Are you alright? I can perceive smoke"

"I will be out in Just a bit." She assured him.

And she hurriedly gathered her things and when she was certain that there was no trace of what she had done she put everything in place and went out.

"Are you alright?" He asked.

She gave him a smile and went to his tablet I inspect his work. "Never better. Now where were we?"

JASMINE'S RETURN/ NEW B... >

Comment 8 View All >

Post your first comment!

Vote Fandom Send Gift

Swipe left to continue >