

Unbreakable 1701

Chapter 1701

---

Undeterred by her silence, Alexis continued, “With such a huge compensation, you will probably have to use your family’s cash flow.”

Have you ever imagined what could happen if you do so?

The threat in his words was palpable. Not content with just targeting Raegan’s studio, Alexis would go after the Foster family’s business should Raegan didn’t comply.

Raegan replied coolly, “Thank you for your concern. But my family’s finances are quite stable at the moment.”

Alexis assumed she was just being stubborn. With a facade of looking out for her interests, he suggested, “Raegan, I was concerned about you. Why don’t you just accept that Mitchel is dead and withdraw the case? Then, I’ll cash out his share of the stocks for you.”

Of course, once the case was withdrawn, how much those shares were cashed out for would be up to Alexis. Using tricks to make the stock prices of the Dixon Group plummet, the money he had to fork out for Raegan would be trimmed to only a fraction of the money due.

Raegan understood Alexis’ ultimate goal was to force her to admit that Mitchel was dead. Only in that way could Alexis proceed with his grand schemes.

Raegan looked at Alexis and said coldly, “Mr. Dixon, Mitchel is not dead. Please watch your words moving forward. I don’t appreciate that kind of talk.”

Her words infuriated Alexis. Raegan, impermeable to both flattery and threats, was proving too difficult to handle. He snarled, “You will soon know what real suffering is.”

As expected, Raegan’s negotiations with several other companies this afternoon became difficult, likely due to Alexis’s interference.

It was almost dark by the time Raegan, exhausted, returned to the studio. She had been living at the studio for two days straight, with no time to go home.

Fortunately, with Annis and the bodyguards at home, Raegan could rest in ease.

Despite the relentless challenges, Raegan didn’t give up. Through her tireless efforts, the situation had almost stabilized. Overall, the losses were much lower than she had anticipated.

The biggest order was from Arthen Entertainment. They didn’t ask for any compensation. Instead, they found a replacement and changed the entire setup themselves. This had helped a lot to significantly reduce Raegan’s losses.

Raegan tried to compensate to Devonte, but he refused.

Devonte even said, “With Mitchel’s issue, it’s only right for a friend of his to look after you. Just wait until he comes back, and everything will be alright.”

Like Raegan, Devonte didn’t believe Mitchel was dead. In his view, Mitchel was invincible. How could Mitchel disappear just like that?

Devonte’s words made Raegan’s nose tingle. She suddenly felt Like crying. She never cried when she was pressured by those heartless people. But just one sentence from Devonte brought her to tears. Many people thought she was delusional, clinging to false hopes. But Devonte chose to believe her.

However, fate wasn't kind to Raegan. When one crisis seemed to abate, another arose.

On Raegan's third day at the studio, she received a call from home.

The driver said frantically, "Miss Foster, I went to Janey's kindergarten to pick her up. I waited for forty minutes, but Annis and Janey hadn't come out. I asked Janey's teacher, and she said they had already left."

Raegan jumped up and instructed, "Go to the security room and check the surveillance footage. I'll be right there."

She then hung up the phone and rushed out of the studio. When she got in the car, she realized she was shaking all over, clearly not in the state to drive.

Raegan called a designated driver to drive her to Janey's kindergarten. On their way, she kept urging the driver to speed up.

Chapter 1702

---

Since Annis had disappeared with Janey, Raegan contacted Elin and they met at the kindergarten gate.

In the school's security room, the drive had already checked the footage three times and saw Annis and Janey walk out of the main gate. But right after they turned a corner, they disappeared.

With trembling hands, Raegan called the police.

However, the police refused to file a case. After all, there was no sign of abduction in the footage.

And Annis and Janey had been missing for less than twenty-four hours.

Raegan felt a chill rise from her feet, her entire body trembling.

She steadied herself on a chair, forced herself to calm down, and watched the surveillance footage again and again.

Finally, she walked to the corner where Annis and Janey had disappeared.

It was not the route Annis usually took. And in the footage, Janey was pulling Annis, seemingly leading the way.

Raegan stood at the entrance of the narrow alley and stared at the surveillance camera that only covered one way, the rest being blind spots. If Annis and Janey were taken away at this corner, the surveillance camera would not have captured it. Obviously, the abductors knew the blind spots well. But the reason behind Janey leading Annis down an unfamiliar path baffled Raegan, her mind in chaos.

In a flash, several people crossed her mind. Alexis. Henley. Katie.

She hated these ruthless beasts to the core. But who exactly took Janey and Annis away?

Raegan got in the car and headed straight to the headquarters of the Dixon Group. Without hesitation, she barged into Alexis' office.

Right then, Alexis was in his expansive executive chair, flirting with his female secretary. The disheveled secretary sat on his lap while he held her pink face. While ki*sing her, Alexis murmured sleazily, "Sweetheart, give it to me. Don't torture me anymore. Just give it to me..."

Their intimate moments were interrupted when the door was slammed open with a bang. Startled, Alexis pushed the secretary away. The secretary yelped when her body hit the floor. Raegan stormed over, slammed the desk, and shouted, "Was it you? Was it you?" Interrupted during his tryst, Alexis, furious, retorted, "Are you sick? What are you talking about?" Raegan scrutinized Alexis. There was no evasion in his gaze, no telltale signs, just annoyance. And it didn't seem an act. Yet, she couldn't rule out Alexis as a suspect. Pale and drained, yet her eyes remained piercing as she looked at Alexis. "Don't touch my daughter. Otherwise, I swear to bring you down." A shiver ran down Alexis' spine, ashamed that he was intimidated by a young woman. He tried to mask his nervousness and said coldly, "Stop spouting nonsense. Withdraw Mitchel's case, and all your trouble will go away." Since Raegan had last disrupted his plans, Alexis had been cautious, keeping a low profile. He was wise enough not to kidnap Raegan's daughter at such a time. "In your dreams!" Raegan yelled, her voice hoarse from agitation. After saying this, she left Alexis' office.

Chapter 1703

---

Alexis didn't mind her anymore. He helped his secretary up from the floor and continued his indulgence.

As soon as Raegan came out of Alexis' office, she gasped for air, clutching her chest. Her anxiety made her heartbeat erratic. She leaned against the wall to steady herself and waited for her heartbeat to stabilize.

Then, a pair of black leather shoes slowly came to a stop in front of her.

Raegan didn't need to raise her head to know who it was since there was an unmistakable coldness about this person.

Henley thrust his hands into his pockets and said in an unhurried tone, "Raegan, why do you have to put yourself through all this?"

Raegan asked numbly, "Henley, was it you? Were you the one who took Janey away?"

She knew he wouldn't tell the truth, but she still asked. She didn't want to lose even a sliver of hope.

Henley looked at her and smiled faintly. "No."

Raegan was too overwhelmed by the current situation to discern his expression. Her body had reacted to the stress. Her head, limbs, and even bones ached.

"Raegan..." Henley's eyes showed a trace of pity as he reached out to gently tuck away her hair. He said softly, "Even though you treat me like this, I can still forgive you."

Raegan, stiff yet reflexively frowning, dodged his touch.

Henley's hand hovered in mid-air. The next moment, he chuckled.

"Raegan, I've told you many times. Confronting things head-on will only bring you trouble and pain."

Raegan didn't want to waste her time on Henley. She had to continue searching for Janey's whereabouts.

Henley smirked coldly and said, "Instead of wasting your efforts, why not just seek my help?"

's

Raegan stopped in her tracks and suddenly turned around. "Do you know where Janey and Annis are?"

Henley replied nonchalantly, "Locating someone is a piece of cake for me."

Raegan knew Henley wanted to take advantage of her vulnerability.

Just as she was about to walk away, Henley said, "Is there really a butterfly fairy?"

Raegan's eyes darkened at once. This was the story she had told Janey.

Raegan told Janey that if she ever got lost, she should not run around. Instead, she should stay where she was and wait for the butterfly fairy to find her.

Raegan rushed back and grabbed Henley's collar. She questioned in a hoarse voice, "Where do you hide my Janey?"

Her face turned pale. And her voice trembled as she shouted, "It was you, right? It was you who took my Janey away. Give her back to me! Give her back!"

Henley remained calm. "Don't be so agitated. If you keep grabbing me like this, everyone will think you're harassing me. Remember the rumors last time? It will be self-defeating."

Chapter 1704

---

So, this was his plan. But Raegan couldn't care less about his schemes this time. Her eyes were cold and fierce with fury. "Are you still a man? She is just a child. A child! Give my child back! Or else I will kill you!"

Her voice was raw as she continued, "I really will kill you!"

Henley smiled faintly. "You are too agitated now. Let's talk when you calm down."

But Raegan didn't intend to let Henley go. She stared at him with eyes glistening with tears.

"Henley, why are you doing this? What do you want?"

Henley smiled coldly. "Don't you know what I want?"

Raegan knew. And that was exactly why she hated him to the core. He should never have involved her daughter. He only made her hate him even more.

Seeing Raegan's distressed expression, Henley smirked condescendingly.

's

"From the beginning to end, it's all been about the Dixon Group and..."

He leaned closer, and his warm breath sprayed on her ear. He continued in an ambiguous tone,

"You..."

Raegan felt extremely uncomfortable when other men got close to her.

But this time, she didn't avoid him. She knew Henley's intentions very well. It was lunchtime, and the employees of the Dixon Group occasionally passed by to head to the cafeteria. Some even videoed this scene and shared it on their group chat.

"According to the rumors, Mr. Henley Dixon is harassing Mr. Mitchel Dixon's ex-wife, right? But watch this video. It seems more than that."

"Yeah. They seem pretty close. Probably having feelings for each other."

"Huh? Does this woman think we are fools? Maybe the two of them only had an argument. Then, she took a video and posted it in the group chat to slander Mr. Henley Dixon."

"Bah! This woman is no good. She is Mr. Mitchel Dixon's ex-wife, but she hooks up with his brother."

The employees were commenting on Raegan and Henley. Their accusations were Like heavy slaps on Raegan's face.

Her eyes hollow, Raegan murmured lowly, "Are you satisfied now? Can you give Janey back to me?"

Henley observed Raegan's clear yet restrained eyes, sensing a hint of tenderness in his heart, but it wasn't sufficient to sway his ambitions.

Having endured the cruel torture of his mentally unstable mother since he was young, Henley grasped the significance of power. He knew that only by clinging to power could he attain everything he wanted, even women.

Henley said bluntly, "I already told you it wasn't me. But I might have an idea where she is."

Raegan's thoughts were all over the place. She didn't have the energy to figure out who was involved. Her only focus was on bringing Janey back.

"Please, Tell me..." Her eyes, clear but filled with tears, begged, "Please, just tell me."

Henley's lips twitched a bit. "You're not very convincing when you beg," he remarked.

"Thud!" Raegan dropped to her knees promptly.

Chapter 1705

"I know it's my fault. I shouldn't have upset you. Please..." Her eyes fixed on Henley with determination as she pleaded, "Please, bring Janey back to me..."

Raegan was willing to do anything for Janey. Every second was crucial.

Otherwise, who knew what those monsters might do to Janey...

"You!" Henley was not pleased but rather furious. Here Raegan was, kneeling before him, surely ruining the image he had just built up.

Others would simply assume he was pressuring her.

"Stand up!" Henley commanded, pulling her up by the arm. "Raegan, don't test my patience!"

Henley dragged Raegan to a hidden corner where they couldn't be seen.

Raegan didn't resist and simply said, "Just give Janey back to me..."

"Is that the only thing you can say?" Henley narrowed his gaze.

Henley might Look like a scholar, but when his expression turned cold, an unexplainable darkness clouded his features. Especially those eyes concealed behind golden-rimmed glasses, like a cunning fox hiding in the shadows.

Beneath his sophisticated exterior, there lay a dangerous appeal, the kind one would find in a modern-day "gentleman rogue."

"What is it that you truly want?" Raegan's eyes were red, her self-control stretched to its breaking point, itching to rip this cunning man apart.

"What do I want?" Gently lifting her chin, Henley offered, "Remain by my side..."

Raegan felt a chill. Holding her disgust, she asked, "What about Miss Holmes from Manning?"

Matilda Holmes had been engaged to Henley for two weeks.

Alexis set up the engagement, thinking it was a suitable match for Henley, given his status.

Matilda's family, renowned for their generosity, had an excellent reputation and were an ideal match.

Henley, charming and good-looking, had swiftly captured Matilda's affection.

Despite the video incident, Matilda stepped up to explain it was just a misunderstanding, showing complete faith in Henley. She was so infatuated that it was like she was under a spell.

"Raegan..." Henley's lips formed a slight smile, his voice husky.

"You should understand, whoever I marry, they can never take your place in my heart."

Raegan felt sick to her stomach. He desired her as his secret lover, kept in the shadows.

The longing in Henley's eyes as he gazed at Raegan was evident as he whispered, "Just stay by my side, Raegan. You won't have to worry about anything. I'll look after you..."

At that moment, Raegan wished she could slap Henley hard across the face. How could someone speak such offensive words without a second thought? His audacity was beyond belief!

Chapter 1706

---

Despite her instinctive repulsion, Raegan's face remained unreadable, showing no signs of emotion, a submission that often appealed to men.

Henley softly laid his hands on her shoulders, whispering in a rough voice, "Don't worry. Once you're with me, I'll make sure you and the child are safe. Even though Janey isn't mine, I won't let her suffer."

Raegan felt nauseous and disgusted listening to Henley's words. He seemed to be saying, "See, I'm even ready to accept your child despite everything. Isn't that enough?"

For the first time, Raegan saw how far human wickedness could go, watching it sink repeatedly.

Surprisingly, Raegan didn't push back. She gazed directly into his eyes and whispered, "If you truly love me, Henley, I need the truth. Did you abduct Janey?"

Henley was caught off guard by her question. It was the first instance Raegan hadn't ignored his declarations of love, which delighted him. He softly ruffled her hair and whispered gently, "I didn't do it." At such a dangerous moment, he wouldn't do something so reckless.

Raegan analyzed his face to make sure he wasn't lying and then looked away.

Henley appreciated her obedient behavior and said gently, "Come over to my place tonight..."

As Henley eagerly reached out to draw her close, Raegan sidestepped him. His face immediately turned dark.

Raegan's face showed a blend of emotions as she said, "Henley, I need some time to think..."

She remained distant, but the typical tension between them was noticeably missing.

Henley observed her for a moment before letting out a chuckle. "Take your time, but remember, the crucial period for finding someone is forty-eight hours. Time is running out..."

Raegan's face went white with this reminder.

Henley pulled her close, speaking softly. "Why hesitate? I've promised to take care of you. My heart has belonged to you and only you for so long..."

Raegan trembled under his touch.

"Fine... Henley, pleased yet not wanting to overwhelm her, gently turned her face toward him, gazing at her affectionately. "I'll give you time... But don't take too long, alright?"

Exhaustion was evident in Raegan's eyes as she gave a soft nod.

Henley gazed at her lovingly and whispered gently, "Do you want me to take you home?"

Raegan refused, "I prefer to be alone."

Henley didn't push and chuckled softly. "Alright." Despite Raegan's current resistance, they had plenty of time ahead of them. He was confident that she would eventually see him as her only option.

Manipulating others was second nature to him.

Walking through the company corridor together, Henley and Raegan unexpectedly bumped into Matilda, who was searching for Henley.

Seeing him, she paused before saying, "Henley..."

Then, Matilda looked at Raegan, a hint of warning in her eyes, considering Raegan's attractive figure and fragile appearance, which naturally prompted sympathy.

Chapter 1707

---

Matilda hadn't encountered Raegan before and was clueless about her identity. "H enley, who is she?" she asked.

Henley replied calmly, "My sister-in-law."

Sister-in-law... The very woman from the scandalous video! Matilda immediately stepped forward, gripping Henley's arm as if to mark her presence. "Hi there."

Raegan could hardly manage a smile and barely acknowledged Matilda's greeting. She swiftly made an excuse to depart, leaving the two.

A hint of awkwardness appeared on Matilda's face as she leaned against Henley, whispering, "Henley, why does it feel like she doesn't like me?"

Henley responded gently, "No, you're thinking too much."

Matilda gazed at him, her expression uneasy. "But... It seems Like there's something between you two..."

"Matilda." Henley's smile weakened a _ little, looking rather intimidating.

It seemed like a regular call, but Matilda strangely felt a hint of danger in it. Instinctively, she started to apologize, "I'm sorry, Henley..."

Little quarrels among engaged couples could often be light-hearted and teasing.

Matilda had lost her cool over minor issues in the past, but she had never witnessed Henley wearing such a stern look. This was the first time she had perceived him as slightly intimidating.

However, the next second, Henley gently drew her close and complimented her, "Darling, you're truly wonderful."

His handsome face seemingly radiated affection.

Matilda melted instantly, feeling both warmth and sweetness in her heart, and quickly let go of her recent irritation. She hugged him tightly, burying her head in his chest. "Henley, I'll come over tonight..."

This was Matilda's main reason for coming today. They had been acquainted and engaged for two months now. It was the right moment to deepen their relationship beyond ordinary courtship.

Henley's chuckle was soft, his whisper teasing. "Coming over to my place... Aren't you concerned I might make a move on you?"

Matilda blushed deeply. She held him tighter, teasingly saying, "You're such a naughty boy..."

Had Matilda glanced up then, she would have seen Henley's expression, cold and devoid of any warmth or love.

Henley murmured with a husky voice, "I've got to stay late at work tonight to finish the project..."

Disappointed yet wanting to be understanding, Matilda responded, "Of course, work comes first."

Eager to offer her assistance, she said, "If there's anything my father can do to help, just say the word."

"sure," Henley replied, embracing her quickly. They looked every bit the enamored couple.

Back in her studio, Raegan reflected on her recent acting. She could confidently say her performance had been quite convincing.

From her act of kneeling to her displays of anger, despair, and eventual acceptance, Raegan assumed she had somewhat deceived Henley.

Chapter 1708

Her act was a tactical choice, given Janey's well-being. Showing vulnerability and impulsiveness could lead the abductors to lower their guard, possibly exposing a weakness.

But Henley had made it clear he wasn't behind it. And Alexis appeared genuinely clueless. So, who had taken Janey away?

Raegan listed suspects on paper, eliminating them one by one, until she paused on Katie's name.

Something clicked, and she immediately called Erick. "Erick, is Katie out yet?"

Raegan hadn't been updated on Katie's situation. Her last memory was of Katie being taken into police custody.

Erick replied, "Yes, she's been released after a suicide attempt by cutting her wrists and is now receiving specialized care."

's

Ever since Janey went missing, Erick had put everything aside to hunt for Janey, checking different places without success. He had also monitored Katie, learning from his sources that she was not permitted any visitors.

Despite Erick's revelation, Raegan still had a feeling that out of all these people, Katie seemed the most suspicious. After a brief pause, she instructed, "Erick, keep an eye on the Glyn family. I'm heading to the hospital to observe Katie."

Erick warned, "You won't be able to visit her at the hospital. She's being closely watched."

Even though there was no solid proof linking Katie to the crime, she was still a suspect, and the police had thus isolated her in a hospital section.

"I understand. I'll just take a look," Raegan replied as she began her mission.

Unexpectedly, as Raegan kept watch outside Katie's ward, she saw Luciana entering Katie's ward. It turned out Katie had specifically requested to meet Luciana.

Once inside, Luciana faced the weak and bedridden Katie, her voice cold as she asked, "What do you need?"

"Luciana..." Katie still called Luciana in the same manner, which Luciana found especially annoying.

Luciana forcefully presented a paternity document to Katie, her tone firm as she said, "Drop your act. Neither Mitchel nor I have anything to do with you anymore."

Katie glanced at the paternity document, her expression unchanged.

At first, Katie couldn't come to terms with the fact that she was pregnant with Abel's child. The news hit her like a shock.

Yet, upon contemplation, Katie desired for the baby to be recognized as Mitchel's despite the truth, a move she aimed to advance her progress in marrying Mitchel. With the syringe that could render Mitchel being sickly tormented by the discomfort, Katie aimed to force Mitchel to marry her. But to her surprise, Mitchel sacrificed himself to save Raegan amid the incident orchestrated by her and Alexis.

From initial disbelief to acceptance, Katie convinced herself it was all for the best. In her mind, with Mitchel gone, she could easily claim the child as Mitchel's, regardless of any counterclaims.

However, Luciana's ensuing actions were unforeseen by Katie, catching Katie off guard with the real paternity test.

With a faint smile, Katie remarked, "Luciana, I've heard you were eager to meet your granddaughter, weren't you?"

Luciana's expression shifted drastically. "What do you mean?"

Luciana had only just been informed about Janey's abduction. Upon hearing the news, she dispatched people to gather information immediately.

Luciana grabbed Katie's hospital attire, questioning, "It was you, wasn't it? You're the one who abducted my granddaughter, correct?"

Chapter 1709

---

Katie began to cough harshly due to Luciana's aggressive grip, her wounds almost opened up again. "Release me..." She gasped.

Luciana kept her grip firm, yelling, "You wretch! If you lay a finger on my granddaughter, I'll kill you!"

Katie continued to cough.

"I'll kill you! You monster!" Luciana was agitated.

At that moment, a nurse rushed in and pulled Luciana back. She scolded Luciana, "How can you treat a patient like this?"

After sipping some water, it took Katie a bit of time to recover.

The nurse asked with concern, "Would you like me to summon the police for you?"

Katie waved her hand tiredly, saying, "No, that won't be necessary. Thank you. You may leave."

The nurse left, puzzled by Katie's decision.

Once they were left alone, Katie cleared her throat and spoke with a hint of defiance. "Luciana, how about we make a deal?"

Luciana's gaze darkened with rage. "Are you aware of the gravity of your actions? You're not just breaking the law. You're adding to your list of crimes!"

Katie covered her mouth and giggled. "Luciana, how can you say that? I just heard something from my friend. Please don't accuse me like that. I'm really scared! But..."

She paused, pretending to wipe away tears, before continuing, "You wanted to hurt me. I was pregnant. The nurse saw you attacked me..."

Luciana froze. It turned out that Katie had deliberately staged the whole thing to have witnesses. This woman was ruthlessly vicious, like a sly fox!

Anger flooded Luciana, her eyes blazing. She demanded, "Where have you hidden my granddaughter? Return her to me immediately, or I will never forgive you, even at my last breath!"

Katie took a sip of water, soothing her throat, and then replied slowly, "Luciana, why do you lose your patience so quickly as you age? I've told you not to forget your medication, but here you are accusing me of wishing you harm. Just look at yourself now."

Luciana was far from Katie's calm demeanor. Janey's missing tormented her, and she could empathize with Raegan's anguish.

Since Mitchel's disappearance, Luciana had seen the true colors of those around her. Except for Raegan, everyone seemed driven by greed.

In her distress, Luciana realized she had unwittingly driven Raegan away, which posed obstacles to Mitchel's reunion with Raegan after having an unhappy life for five whole years.

Although Raegan's incident five years ago wasn't her fault, Luciana couldn't help but blame herself. If only she had sincerely welcomed Raegan, Raegan and Mitchel might not have endured so much suffering.

They could have lived merrily now...

It was always after losing something that people realized its true value.

Luciana only hoped that Janey would return to Raegan safely. She was ready to pay any price to ensure that. Even with her life on the line, she was determined to do so.

Once she had composed herself, Luciana asked, "Tell me, what do you want?"

Chapter 1710

---

Seeing that Luciana gave in, Katie set down her cup and said calmly, "Withdraw your accusation a gainst me and acknowledge that my child is the rightful heir to the Dixon family."

Luciana's anger made her hands shake. Katie had betrayed her trust by having an affair with another man, claiming her bodyguard's child belonged to the Dixon family. It was the first time that she had seen such a shameless woman!

Yet, for Janey's safety, Luciana had to agree. "I'll do everything you ask," she said without hesitation.

"And the sample I left before, and Mitchel's, I want them all destroyed. Leave no trace."

"I promise," Luciana replied firmly.

"Words alone aren't enough," Katie insisted. She demanded Luciana prepare both a written statement and a video recording.

Moreover, after Luciana recorded the video acknowledging her child's origin, Katie promptly shared the news on the Dixon Group's official website.

Once it was public, Luciana felt trapped, knowing she couldn't take her words back. The official website was a serious platform where any false news could heavily impact the Dixon Group's stock value.

Luciana pleaded, "I've done what you asked. Can I see my granddaughter now?"

's

Katie replied calmly, "Hold on. Now's not the time."

Luciana's frustration boiled over. "What are you saying, Katie? I've followed your instructions, yet you still won't let me see my granddaughter. If you're trying to trick me, I swear I'll go to extremes to make your life miserable!"

"Calm down..." Katie, showing signs of impatience, cut in. "I haven't finished yet."

Katie handed Luciana a black phone. "Do as the phone instructs, and you'll see her. But remember, don't tell anyone about this, or you might lose the chance to see your beloved granddaughter forever..."

Even as Katie smiled, there was a chilling quality to her grin.

Luciana, aware of Katie's ruthless nature, chose her steps carefully.

Once outside Katie's ward, Luciana encountered Raegan, who was anxiously waiting.

Raegan immediately grabbed Luciana's hand, her voice filled with urgency. "Mrs. Dixon, what did Katie tell you? Do you know where Janey is?"

Luciana remained silent, Katie's threats vivid in her mind.

As the seconds ticked by, Raegan grew increasingly worried. Janey had been missing for nearly two days. But there were still no leads on her whereabouts.

Even though the police had started investigating because Erick insisted, they hadn't found any clues yet.

Annis was suspected of taking Janey away, making the police treat it as an acquaintance committing a crime. They focused on digging into Annis' social circle, and even Annis' daughter, Elin, was brought in for questioning.

Raegan couldn't accept the idea that Annis would kidnap Janey. To Annis, Janey was like her own granddaughter. But the police weren't convinced and were at a dead end for now.

Raegan was overwhelmed with despair. Luciana had to support Raegan to keep her from falling.

Through her tears, Raegan asked Luciana, "Mrs. Dixon, do you have any news about Janey? Please, tell me anything..."