

Chapter 183

"Can I come in, Lamb?"

"Of course." My voice sounds weak, but it doesn't sound sad or dejected, just tired.

"I am so sorry, baby. I had no idea that was you or I would've said something sooner. I know my dad said he kept that from us so it wouldn't worsen your image of me, but I feel like that is something we should've known. And then everything else that I put you through, how are you ever going to forgive me?" He looks so sad. I hate this look on him.

He's kneeling next to the tub now, his face close to mine, I reach over and cup his cheeks with my hands, looking straight into his emerald green eyes. "There's nothing left to forgive. You show me every day that you are trying to be better for me, for us."

"All of your loss could've been prevented..."

"We don't know that. We don't know that those wolves were just chasing you. We don't know that they wouldn't have attacked us anyway had you not been on the road or had left at a different time. I cannot start regretting things that I cannot change. That is something I've been working on for so long, I can't go back now. This is the way things are and I just want to enjoy what I have now.

Bang!

"Alpha, Luna we have a situation." Josh is shouting from the door to our bedroom.

Ryker moves to make sure that he's in front of me, even though Josh is nowhere near the doorway to see me in the tub.

"What's going on Josh?" Ryker calls over his shoulder.

"Several omegas have been reported missing and now there's a fire blazing in the southwest corner of the town. Greta said someone knows our patrol pattern based on where people are reported going missing and the times."

I don't even hesitate. I jump up and grab a towel before Ryker can move to stop me. He runs behind me into the bedroom. I throw clothes on not caring that Josh is here. "We need to move now! Has everybody been evacuated from the fire?"

"Hold on! We don't know any more details than that, our Warriors are on it." Josh holds his hands up trying to slow me down.

"So now is the perfect time to get moving!" Ryker grabs my arm.

"I need you to stay here and safe, let us handle this."

"I will not standby while pack members are in danger! We've had this conversation before and you did not win! Let's go!" I run out of the room before he can stop again, sending a mindlink to Bennet. He and Josh follow me down the stairs and out the front door. Bennett is waiting with the car, he knows I wasn't gonna stay behind and didn't even look phased at my request.

"I can take the Luna down to where the fires are and we can check on all of the people in that area. Let us know what you find out with the missing people." Bennet nods at them both as I jump into the passenger seat. He jumps into the driver side and we take off before either Josh or Ryker can say anything to the contrary.
