Chapter 108: If You're Happy, That's All That Matters

There was a brief pause before Kang Li continued, "It was also my idea to install the additional water faucet, and as for the items you see added in the living room, the TV set was a wedding gift from my second brother, the sewing machine, bicycle, and radio were part of my dowry. However, I'm thinking of packing the TV and sending it back to my hometown before the New Year, so the people there can also learn more about the outside world through it. You don't mind, do you?"

Luo Yanqing: "I'll take care of it."

Kang Li: "... " After a moment of hesitation, the corners of Kang Li's mouth twitched slightly as she said, "The bedroom is quite spacious, so I partitioned off a small room to use as my study," since it had come to this, she might as well say it all, and with that thought, Kang Li blinked her clear, fox-like eyes, "I think you wouldn't mind."

Luo Yanqing: "As long as you're happy."

Kang Li: "... " What does that mean? What does "As long as you're happy" mean?

Can't you speak more clearly?

Muttering to herself, Kang Li remembered that she hadn't mentioned buying a washing machine and so she broached the subject again, "Also, I bought a washing machine for the house, using the foreign exchange coupons you left with Auntie Qi."

Luo Yanqing: "I know."

Seeing Kang Li standing without moving, he pursed his lips in silence for a moment before asking, "Is there anything else?"

“Ruirui and the others miss you very much. Now that you’re home on leave, you should spend more time with them.”

Hearing Kang Li say this, Luo Yanqing did not respond.

“Raising children isn’t just about feeding them and clothing them, they need their parents’ company even more.”

But even after Kang Li had gone this far in her speech, Luo Yanqing still did not respond.

“Alright, I have nothing more to say. You do what you need to, I’ll go check on Ruirui and the others.” With that, Kang Li left for the children’s room.

Min Rui was sitting in his chair at the desk, looking through a children’s version of an animal encyclopedia.

In the twins, the brother with his little legs crossed sat on his own bed, playing with a tin wind-up frog, while his sister lay beside his bed piecing together a tangram puzzle.

It must be said that whether it was the animal encyclopedia Min Rui was looking at, the toys the twins were playing with, or the other toys and children’s books in their room, all had been purchased by Kang Li with points from the System’s Mall.

They were in line with the characteristics of the era—in other words, those books and toys were available for sale in this era’s market.

Mom, where’s dad?

Upon hearing the door open, Xiao Ming Wei turned to look at the entrance. Seeing Kang Li walk in, she asked immediately where her father was.

“Your father is in the study. Mom came to see you all.”

Approaching, she sat down at the edge of the bed and rubbed the little girl's head.

A father, not keen on being close to his own children, could it be he intended to be a stern father?

But even if that were the case, surely he could at least manage to talk with his children, couldn't he?

Kang Li frowned slightly, she was quite perplexed by Luo Yanqing's attitude towards Min Rui and the others.

Xiao Ming Wei: "Mom, what are you thinking about?"

Kang Li smiled, "Mom is thinking about what delicious food to make for you for lunch."

Xiao Ming Han: "Fried chicken legs, Hanhan wants to eat fried chicken legs, want to eat yummy meat!"

Xiao Ming Wei swallowed softly and also said in a milky voice, "Vivi also wants to eat fried chicken legs."

"Alright, as you wish."

Kang Li's eyes were tender as she nodded, played with the twins for about ten minutes, then stood up and said, "It's about time for Ruirui to practice his writing now, and Hanhan and Vivi, you two continue practicing writing numbers, just four lines, and after you're done, sit quietly and don't disturb your brother while he's practicing."
