Chapter 43: She's a Good Girl

Kang Li's eyes curved like a crescent moon, teasing the sticky rice bun in her arms.

Xiao Ming Wei naturally didn't know what teasing meant, she adorably shook her head: "No, no, Vivi likes mommy, also likes Little Uncle, as well as grandpa and Big Brother Kang, Vivi likes them very much oh!"

At that moment, not only did Kang Li marvel at Xiao Ming Wei's cleverness in her heart, but Captain Kang and the other two also realized how smart Xiao Ming Wei was.

"Alright, Little Uncle will hold you."

Having taken Xiao Ming Wei, Kang Guoan cradled her in his arms.

A group of people got into the car, and after about forty minutes, the car entered the research institute's courtyard and stopped in front of the Luo family's gate.

The research institute's courtyard was primarily made up of independent bungalow courtyards, but although they were called small courtyards, each plot was actually quite large; taking the Luo family's courtyard as an example, the yard space alone was about a hundred flats.

Furthermore, including Elder Song, those who lived in this family courtyard also resided in bungalows.

“Sit inside the house, yesterday Old Song had someone clean up inside and outside thoroughly.”

Opening the courtyard gate, Mrs. Qi invited Kang Li and the others into the yard and led them to the main house.

It must be said, the main house in the yard had four rooms, and each side had an additional annex room.

Part of the annex on the left side was the kitchen, and the rest was used for storage.

The annex on the right side was a bathroom and a flushable squat toilet that Luo Yanqing had recently installed when he moved in.

Then there were the other arrangements in the yard.

A vegetable patch, a tap, and two peach trees as thick as an adult's wrist.

That was all.

That was what Kang Li observed as she looked around the yard.

At that time, He Feng was sitting in the living room talking with Captain Kang, Big Brother Kang, and Kang Guoan, while Mrs. Qi led Kang Li to visit the four main rooms.

“Ruirui and the others are still young, so we let them and their sister stay in one room for now, this partitioned half-room next to it is for Vivi when she grows a bit older.”

As they walked, Mrs. Qi explained: “These two rooms on this side, one is a guest room, the other is a study. The guest room was previously occupied by a hired nanny, but it had already been cleaned yesterday. The rest includes the living room, which is also the parlor, and the master bedroom where you and Little Luo will stay.”

Upon reaching the master bedroom, Mrs. Qi pointed at the bedding on the bed and said: “All of this is new, you can use it with confidence.”

Military green bedding, military green sheets, in short, all the beddings were uniformly military green, even the curtains hanging were military green; had Kang Li not known this was a home, and that this home was situated within the research institute’s courtyard, she would have thought she had entered a military camp.

“I understand everything now, thank you!”

Kang Li smiled and thanked Mrs. Qi.

“There’s no need to be so polite, if you don’t mind, you can call me Auntie Qi just like Little Luo does.”

Mrs. Qi looked at Kang Li with a fond gaze, to be honest, this young girl was the most beautiful she had ever seen, as if a fairy descended from heaven, possessing beauty that made one forget to breathe, beauty that was hard to look away from, all while exuding an ethereal charm.

Yet, she wasn’t like the fairies in the legends who were aloof and high above; she had a very approachable smile. No, even without smiling, just those clear, bright eyes and the dimples on her cheeks gave off a sense of closeness.

Mrs. Qi silently nodded to herself repeatedly; she was a good girl.

“Alright.”

Kang Li’s eyes curved and she nodded with a smile.

“By the way, the kitchen is stocked with rice, flour, oil, and seasonings... the stove is already lit, and there’s a kettle on it. Also, there are about a hundred coal bricks left at home; when you run out, take this booklet to buy some, if you don’t know the place, you can ask around our compound, or you can directly find me, and I’ll take you there once, you’ll know the way after that.”
