Chapter 25 Who Hit You?

As the oxygen in Lillian's body became less and less, Zachary's attacks became more and more fierce.

Just before she was about to be suffocated to death, Zachary finally let go.

Before letting her go, he bit her lips viciously.

He pinched Lillian's chin and looked at her with disdain and ridicule. "Are you satisfied? There is no need to target Beatrice anymore or linger and create chance encounters repeatedly. I will satisfy you!"

Lillian breathed in the fresh air, rolled her eyes, and took a few minutes to regain her thinking.

It turned out that he was avenging Beatrice!

"Hmph! I hate you!" She muttered, looking at the ceiling.

Originally, Lillian thought her heart was already dead and would no longer feel pain, but now it started to throb as if it had been cut into pieces by a thousand knives.

She clutched her chest, suffocating from the pain.

Zachary's eyes trembled when he saw the pain in the corners of Lillian's brows and eyes, but then he sneered.

“Are you pretending to be miserable? You’ve been acting and jumping up and down in front of me. Isn’t it just to increase your presence and make me notice you?”

Lillian felt even more nauseated, and her anger filled her broken heart with hostility.

She sat up, rounded her arms, slapped Zachary hard, and roared hysterically, “Zachary! To me, you have always been trash! Complete, non-recyclable trash! Stop being so pretentious! I will never love you again in this life!”

After answering the phone, Ashton turned around and returned to the ward. He found Lillian’s eyes were red, and her hair was disheveled. Naturally, he knew that Lillian was being bullied. He punched Zachary hard with his huge fist, and kicked him a few times.

Lillian raised her head and held back her tears. “Let’s go. Don’t we have a doctor’s appointment?” Ashton then gave up beating Zachary and turned back to Lillian. Lillian put her arms around Ashton’s neck and hung on him like a koala.

The two walked away.

Seeing the two’s closeness, Zachary was so shocked that he didn’t even bother to wipe the blood from the corner of his mouth, only murmuring to himself, “Is this all a coincidence?”

It took a long while before Zachary got up and returned to Beatrice’s room.

Beatrice saw Zachary’s somewhat darkened brow bones, and worried tears rolled down her face. “Who hit you? Why did he hit you?”

Zachary turned a deaf ear to Beatrice’s concern and cries, but the scene of Ashton carrying Lillian away flashed before his eyes.

“Zachary, are you okay?” Beatrice stretched out her hand and waved it in front of Zachary’s eyes. Only then did Zachary come to his senses. “I’m fine. You have a good rest. I’ll leave first.”

“Zachary, did you go to see Ms. Wilson?” Beatrice stopped crying. Her hazy tears could not cover her sharp eyes.

At this moment, Beatrice didn't care about pretending to be weak but gently wiped Zachary's forehead and corners of his mouth with a handkerchief.

"Ah, actually, I also noticed Ms. Wilson. She went to take a CT scan. Maybe she was emotionally unstable after knowing some news. Why did you bother to provoke her?"

Zachary narrowed his eyes and looked at Beatrice. "What do you mean?"

Beatrice seemed to realize she had made a mistake and quickly covered her mouth.

"It's nothing. I was overthinking it. I had a preconception that Ms. Wilson might be That's why she went to take a CT scan. After all, I had a friend like this before." Zachary frowned, and before he had time to think about it, the door to the ward was kicked open! "Clap! Clap! Clap!"

Lillian walked in, clapping her hands.
