

Widow 106

Chapter 106

“Well, Miss Stacie, you really don’t know why I’m looking for you?”

Stacie’s heart skipped a beat. “How... how do I know?”

“It’s okay if you don’t know,” Luke said lightly, “You’ll know in a while.”

Before Stacie could understand what he meant, someone suddenly grabbed her by the shoulder and pulled her out. Stacie screamed angrily, “Hey!”

The man didn’t answer. He opened the back door, stuffed Stacie in, and then got behind the steering wheel.

mess, but she had no time to care about it, trying to open the car door. The door was tightly shut, and she could do nothing about it. Stacie asked in horror, “What

Stacie saw the stranger start her car and drive away, heading to an

and took out her phone. As soon as she unlocked the screen, she heard Luke’s Stacie froze.

lip and said, “Luke, if we need we arrive at the place, there will naturally be a chance for you to

continued, “But now,

hands bulged out,

never been here. Watching the desolate scene around her, she opened her eyes wide. “Luke... What do you want to do?! I am the third young lady of the White family... you can’t...” Luke made a gesture, and the man in black, who had been driving, directly pulled Stacie out of bright light stimulated her, and she couldn’t open her eyes. She felt that someone opened some iron door and pushed her in. Stacie opened her eyes in a panic, only to see that she was locked in a cage. When she