

Widow 58

Chapter 58

Looking at Dora, Antony felt that he was probably crazy.

Crystal had chosen to return to this city for fame and money. No matter what happened, she should be responsible for herself. He had almost had a dispute with his father just because of her. What's more, it would be a pity for Dora when he did this. If his little sister knew why he had a conflict with their father, she would definitely be upset.

The girl felt so insecure. Ever since Crystal'd returned, she had been worrying about gains and losses.

"It's nothing," Antony said, "Didn't Dad want me to join the company before? I'm not interested. My brother's already worked there like a fish in water. If I join now, won't I make trouble for him?" "It's for your own good that Dad asked you to join the company. You're about to graduate from college. You have to find a job," said Dora.

"Right," Antony said, "I'm good. I'll go back first. You should rest early as well."

"Good night, Antony," nodded Dora.

Antony waved his hand and walked away along the corridor.

Dora's face instantly turned malevolent.

come here a long time had come to find out Daxton's attitude toward this. She hadn't expected Antony to come a step ahead of her. She had been and Antony, who had hated her so much before, had already gone to plead with his father for

be best if that lunatic Corey could torture

the spacious and soft bed. She rolled one round and realized that Harold was no longer here. She got up and heard some rumbling noise downstairs. Worriedly, she people and many new things downstairs. Harold was sitting on the sofa nodded with her messy long

down and take

"Wait." Crystal stood there in confusion, watching Harold going upstairs. Because he was at home, he was wearing a loose black shirt. He didn't look as serious as when down at her, asking, "Are you going to meet people realize that she was wearing Harold's T-shirt, and she didn't even Crystal was completely baffled.

"I just woke up.

tender toes. "You didn't