Chapter 631

Crystal was defeated by Harold's sweet words.

When she returned to the dormitory, her ears were all red, but fortunately, no one noticed.

Annette suddenly exclaimed and asked, "Have you read the forum?"

Confused, Crystal asked, "What forum?"

"The campus forum." Annette dragged a chair over and said, "Oh God, the two of you are popular. now."

She felt even more embarrassed now.

Natalie thought for a moment and said, "In fact, I'm really curious about why you chose C. Why was it not A or B or D?"

Crystal covered her face and said, "Haven't you heard that we should choose the longest answer among the shorter answers and choose the shortest answer among the longer answers? For the answers that look similar, we should just choose C. I was sleeping at that time, so I subconsciously chose C."

Crystal looked at Harold in a daze. In that instant, she recalled the past.

She and Harold had just known each other. When she lost her way in the Evans residence, Harold also climbed over the wall to look for her, holding her hand and walking step by step in the moonlight and fragrant flowers.

Why did you climb over the wall again?” Crystal said, “Get down quickly.”

Harold landed lightly in front of her, as if the three-meter-long high wall was nothing to him. Crystal was frightened, but he was like a butterfly, falling to the place where she could reach, and holding a handful of snow white flowers in his hand.

He brought the flowers to Crystal and said, “Take them.”

Crystal’s eyes widened. “Are they for me?”

Harold narrowed his eyes. “Do you think I bought them for myself?”

Crystal happily took the delicate flowers and asked, “What flowers are they?”

Chapter 634

Sadie sat on the balcony, enjoying the breeze.

She looked at the lights in the city. This bustling city, which had been prosperous for hundreds of years, seemed to be always so lively. The lights were on all night.

There was a bottle of wine and a stack of medical records on the table next to her.

Sadie took a sip of wine, wiped the wine stains on the corners of her mouth, and slowly tore the medical records apart. The night wind messed up her long hair. Her eyelashes drooped. She was originally smiling, but somehow, a tear slowly flowed down.

She lifted her fingertips and wiped away the teardrop. She muttered, "What are you crying for?"

Even if she knew that she could only live for a short time due to the incurable disease, she would not cry for it. Pieces of paper were piled up on the ground. Sadie lay back on the chair and looked up at the quiet moon and stars in the sky.

The woman said that she had broken free from the cage, so she should enjoy the freedom that she had worked hard to get. However, Sadie still felt that there was an invisible shackle on her, which made her hard to breathe.

Sadie took another sip of wine. The burning sensation went all the way down from the tip of her tongue, her mouth, her esophagus, and her stomach, causing Sadie's tears to flow even more fiercely.

Danny was silent for a moment and said, "In my impression, he's not good at words."

Sadie looked at him sideways. She was probably a little drunk, and her eyes were a little blurred. "Is he the same as you?"

Speaking of this, she smiled again. "If that's the case, I didn't have to run away from the wedding."

Danny frowned and said, "Sadie, you are drunk."

"No." Sadie went to pick up her glass. Danny held her hand and said, "You're drunk."

Early the next morning, the freshmen gathered and went to the base. Crystal sat on the bus and looked at the scenery outside. As soon as Natalie unscrewed the water bottle, she suddenly felt that her chair had been kicked, and the water in her hand almost spilled out.

Natalie turned her head with a smile on her face. "Phyllis, you're not going to stop, are you?"

Hearing the voice, Crystal also turned her head and saw that the one sitting behind her was the short-haired girl she had seen in the canteen before. This time, Crystal knew her name. It turned out to be Phyllis.

With a lollipop in her mouth, she looked like a very bad girl. In the face of Natalie's inquiry, she held her arm and said, "I didn't do it on purpose. Why are you so fierce?"

Natalie smiled and said, "Am I fierce now?" She smiled and said, "You haven't seen me being fierce before."

It was a very simple task for Matilda. She said casually, "Okay."

"What's the girl's name?"

Phyllis said, "Crystal Evans!"

"Crystal Evans?" Matilda frowned. "Why do I feel that this name sounds so familiar? I think I've heard of it somewhere."

"No way." Phyllis said, "She was alone when she came for registration, and her clothes are not branded goods. She doesn't look like she's rich. How could you have heard of her name?"

Matilda thought about it and agreed. Perhaps she had remembered wrongly. After all, although few people knew the Delilah family in City W, and there was a huge gap between them and the aristocratic families, ordinary people could not compare with them.

"Don't worry," Matilda said, "I will definitely help you vent your anger."

Crystal did not know what she would experience.

They arrived at the base at 12 o'clock. After lunch, they gathered together for the first time at two o'clock. At about one o'clock, a few girls in the dormitory huddled together to put on sunscreen.

Not only their faces, but also their necks, arms, and legs. They had to apply sunscreen to all exposed parts.

Natalie applied sunscreen to Crystal's neck and began to act frivolously. "Your skin is so smooth. I want to take a bite of it."

... Crystal said, "You sound like a pervert."

“Hahahaha, really?” Natalie leaned on her shoulder and sighed. “If I were a man, I would like you too. I’ve lost to you in the school beauty contest this time but I think you deserve it.”

Crystal looked at Matilda in shock.

Was there something wrong with the instructor’s brain?!

“Instructor.” Natalie walked out and said, “I’m Crystal’s roommate. I can prove that she isn’t wearing any makeup.*

Annette was about to step forward when Elvira pulled her back and whispered, “Are you crazy?! Are you thinking of going against the instructor? Do you not care about your credits anymore?”

Annette bit her lip and did not step out.

Natalie seemed to have never considered this. She stood beside Crystal and said, "Instructor, Crystal is only born with a good appearance. You can't just say that someone is wearing makeup just because she looks good, right?"

Crystal didn't expect that Antony would actually come to be an instructor. She took a closer look at the people who were playing basketball with him. Freud, Mason, Leroy... All his friends were there.

Crystal, ...

Crystal didn't think that either of them was handsome, so she could only try to be perfunctory. "Well, they're not bad."

"Not bad?!" Annette was shocked and asked Natalie, "What about you? What do you think?"
